D. C. Area Faces Rise In Milk Price After Oct. 1

Move to Restore Virginia Cut, If Successful, Will Affect City

Residents of metropolitan Washington face a possible increase of one cent a quart in the price of milk after October 1.

The resulting price of 22 cents a quart for delivered Grade A or plain homogenized milk would be the highest in the city's history.

This possibility loomed as the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association prepared to ask today for restoration of an April 1 cut in the price paid by local dairies to farmer producers.

The producer association request will be made at today's hearing on price adjustments being held by the Virginia State Milk Commission. Commission decisions on price changes, while legally binding only in Virginia, are generally followed in the whole Washington metropolitan area.

If the association's request for an October 1 increase in the basic wholesale price from the present $5.60 per hundredweight to $6.06 is approved by the commission, local dairies will have to boost retail prices by 1 cent a quart, dairy spokesmen said yesterday.

Last April 1, when the producers' price dropped 46 cents a hundredweight, dairies cut their prices 1 cent a quart to a delivered price of 20½ cents a quart for Grade A or plain homogenized milk.

However, on August 1 Washington area dairies increased the retail price half a cent a quart to cover increased costs due to the shorter work week won by the dairy employes' union after a two-week strike.

A 1-cent increase on October 1, added to the half-cent increase of August 1, would make the delivered price of the Grade A or plain homogenized 22 cents a quart. The highest price on record here is the 21½ cents charged between August, 1949, and last April 1, when the last cut was made.

Meantime the State Milk Commission overruled an attempt to prevent a joint public hearing in Richmond for the 33 markets over which it has authority to fix prices of milk.

Lee Ford, Newport News attorney representing consumers in the peninsula area, made a vigorous effort to prevent the hearings scheduled yesterday and today on the grounds that they should be held in the areas affected and not in Richmond.

Another Quake Reported From Assam Region

BOMBAY, India, Sept. 13 (AP).—Reports from North Assam said a 90-second series of earth tremors more violent than the August 15 earthquake shook the area today.

Seismographs registered the August 15 quake as the world's fifth severest shock. Unofficial counts placed last month's death toll at 5000, but Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru said after a flying tour of the stricken area that he doubted that more than 1000 had lost their lives. However, five million persons were left homeless.

No details were immediately available concerning the damage today. The tremor apparently centered at Dibrugargh, a city of 80,000, which also suffered severe damage in the quake of a month ago. A dispatch from the city said a church, heavily damaged in the earlier quake, crumbled completely.

Msgr. Sheen Leaves C. U. Post To Head Pontifical Mission

The Right Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen has resigned from Catholic University to become national director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith.

In announcing his acceptance of the directorship yesterday, Msgr. Sheen said that he would continue his annual series of radio talks on the Catholic Hour, but would cancel all other speaking engagements except those connected with the society.

His resignation as professor of philosophy at the university brings to an end a distinguished career of 23 years here as priest, teacher, speaker and author.

Beginning November 1, he will head the organization officially known as the Pontifical Mission Aid Societies in the United States, which marshals the spiritual and material resources of American Catholics in behalf of missionary activities throughout the world.

The society, with headquarters in New York, has about one million members in 121 dioceses in the United States.

Two Bandits Take $121 From Airline

Two dapper bandits last night robbed the Northwest Airlines office at 1510 H st. nw. of $121.

The holdup was staged at about 6 p. m. As soon as detectives had obtained a description of the two bandits, a lookout was broadcast on the police radio.

Detective Sergt. Patrick Deenihan of the robbery squad also instructed the police radio dispatcher to furnish the lookout to all radio-dispatched cabs in the downtown area on the chance they might spot the holdup men.

Miss Morviea Colby, 28, of 1457 Park rd. nw., was at the front counter of the ticket office when the two nattily dressed men entered. Both held their hands in their topcoat pockets as though they were armed.

One told Miss Colby, "You know what we want." He walked round the counter and looked disdainfully at the $56 in the cash drawer. While his companion stood guard over Miss Colby, he walked to a rear office where two other girls, Miss Margaret D. Strohm of 1363 Harvard st. nw. and Miss Eileen Anderson of 2827 28th st. nw., were working.

He surveyed the room, said "Hi" to the two girls, then returned to the front counter, where he asked Miss Colby to open the safe. She said she did not know the combination.

He took Miss Colby into the rear office. Again his companion remained in front. As Miss Colby entered the rear office she told Miss Anderson, "Call the police."

Miss Anderson picked up the telephone but quickly dropped it at the bandit's sharp command. The bandit then ordered all three girls into the rest room and promised them, "Stay inside and don't yell and you won't get hurt."

The girls waited five minutes, then came out. They found $5 missing from Miss Anderson's purse, $60 from Miss Colby's purse and $56 from the cash drawer.

Police said the three girl employes were alone in the office at the time of the holdup. Adrian Alrick, office manager, who was away at the time, indicated later to reporters there was an undisclosed sum of money in the safe.

It was the second time the office had been held up. Last April 22 a lone gunman escaped with $101 in cash and $594 in checks.

Hotel Records Clear Him, Lappin Says

Chicago Data Disputes Shimon's Testimony, Wire-Tap Group Told

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Abner (Chick) Lappin went to the Capitol last night with records purporting to show he was staying in a Chicago hotel during five of the 20 days Police Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon has testified he was trailing Lappin here.

Lappin is the mon who Senator Brewster (R., Me.) insists shadowed him during the 1947 investigation of Howard Hughes' wartime plane contracts by the Senate War Investigating Committee, then headed by Brewster. Lappin denies he ever shadowed the senator.

Shimon, according to Brewster, was retained to follow Lappin and that was the reason why the Senator said he paid the policeman's room expenses at the Mayflower and Carlton Hotels.

The alleged "shadow" turned over his hotel records to Martin Fay, special counsel of the Senate wire-tapping subcommittee.

After the brief Capitol conference, Fay said Lappin produced a receipted bill for expenses at the Stevens Hotel in Chicago for July 28, 29 and 30 of 1947 and a rendered bill from the same hotel for August 3 and 4.

The bill for the later period did not indicate what year it covered.

$3 Million Voted For Completion of Baltimore Blvd.

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday approved a three million dollar grant to begin completion of the Washington-Baltimore parkway.

Other funds voted for Washington area projects included:

Money to put the Park Police on a five-day week.

Five hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars to buy the property adjoining Blair and Blair-Lee Houses on Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Twenty thousand dollars to complete the long uncompleted frieze in the Capitol rotunda.

'Hill' Authorizes School Funds In Areas Crowded by U. S. Aides

The Senate last night unanimously passed a bill to provide Federal funds to help operate schools in districts swollen by an influx of Government workers and military personnel.

The measure already had passed the House. The Senate Appropriations Committee earlier yesterday voted $23,347,000 to carry out its provisions during this fiscal year.

The bill authorizes Federal aid for three years, and succeeds in part the wartime Lanham Act, which has expired.

Senator Watkins (R., Utah) spoke against the bill, but in the end did not vote against it. He said he thought "too many people are getting a free ride" under the program.

Senator Hill (D., Ala.) said that the aim was to help school districts "impacted" by school children of military personnel. He said only a few children of civilian Government employes would be affected.

But when Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) asked if the bill would not affect the school districts in areas surrounding Washington, Senator Hill said they would probably be included if they met the bill's requirements.

One of these requirements is that a school district's school population must have been increased by 10 percent or more by children of Federal or military personnel.

The U. S. Office of Education will have to work out details of the aid program for each district.

The measure is a companion bill to one passed previously by the Senate, but not yet acted on by the House. This second measure is a Federal aid program for constructing schools, whereas the one passed last night provides for aid in operating expenses.

Recess Plans Threatened By Two Bills

Move to Await Action On Anti-Red Measure, Profits Tax Could Keep Congress Here

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Movements to hold Congress in session until (1) the President acts on pending anti-Red legislation and (2) an excess profits tax is enacted yesterday threatened to upset a drive to recess or adjourn Congress Saturday.

Leaders renewed efforts to clear all emergency business and get Congress out of town this weekend, however. Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said he still thinks it a "good possibility."

Anti-subersive legislation. Though President Truman recently told reporters he would not sign the McCarran omnibus Red control bill, three separate Administration sources at the Capitol said they were still not convinced he would veto the bill. One flatly said he would sign it. In answer to Republican and Southern Democratic threats to hold Congress in session until the President acts, leaders predicted Mr. Truman will act quickly in any event.

Showdown On Floor Today

Tax legislation. An independent Democratic move in the House to compel action this session on excess profits taxation will go to a floor showdown today. The test will come on amending a Rules Committee resolution sending the $4,508,000,000 Senate-passed tax bill to conference. Thirty-two House Republicans issued a statement saying they will vote against adjourning Congress until an excess profits tax is passed.

The catch-all McCarran Communist control bill, requiring registration of Reds and officers of "front" organizations now, and internments of subversives in wartime, meanwhile, was delayed in the House by a single objection to sending it to conference.

The Senate passed the bill Tuesday by a 70 to 7 vote. Yesterday Representative Vito Marcantonio, New York's leftist ALP member, blocked a unanimous consent request for an immediate House-Senate conference. The House Rules Committee promptly reported out a resolution to put the bill in the hands of conferees. The resolution will be called up in the House today.

Reason for Doubts

Doubt cast on former hints of a Presidential veto followed Tuesday's vote by a preponderance of Senate Administration Democrats, including Lucas, for the broadened McCarran measure.

One Capitol Administration informant insisted the President was talking about the Mundt-Nixon bill when he said he wouldn't sign it—that he had never seen the final McCarran bill draft.

Registration features of the McCarran bill, however, are virtually identical with the Mundt-Nixon measure and other provisions go far beyond it. Administration forces added the plan for Red "concentration camps" in wartime.

One Senator suggested that as a possible "out" Mr. Truman may find the concentration camp plan

House Rider On U. S. Jobs Eliminated

Senate Unit Adds Provision of Its Own; Million Dollars Voted For Loyalty Study

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The Senate Appropriations Committee last night struck out the House-approved rider to make all promotions, transfers, and reinstatements to classified jobs on a temporary basis.

Instead, it added a rider of its own to have Federal agencies certify the names of its qualified employes to be laid off to defense jobs, but at no increase in either grade or salary. The amendment also would give the Defense Department the authority to call on other Federal agencies for additional personnel.

The committee took its action in reporting out the 17-billion-dollar supplemental appropriation bill—a measure that would make funds available to hire thousands of additional Federal workers.

The Civil Service Commission and the Agriculture Department both urged the committee to drop the House personnel rider. The substitute amendment was offered by Chairman Johnston of the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

House Rider Is In Effect

Oddly enough, the restrictive House rider is now in effect and it has been since September 2. On that date the President signed into law a joint congressional resolution which permitted agencies to be advanced funds carried in the supplemental bill as it passed the House, but under "terms and conditions" in the House bill. The personnel rider which complicates most personnel actions, is one of the conditions in the measure.

The House rider also provides that persons who were laid off can be reemployed only at their last salary and grade.

The committee voted to give the Civil Service Commission one million dollars to make loyalty investigations of the 500,000 new defense employes the Government now expects to hire. The commission requested $1,860,000. It approved six million dollars for the FBI, enough money for it to add 1200 additional employes.

More for Social Security

Funds also were approved for several agencies to hire upwards of 6000 new employes to carry out the new Social Security Act. The Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance would get $60,488,000 of the $63,738,000 it requested. Internal Revenue would get $3,700,000, and Federal Security agencies would get funds to expand operations in the administrator's office, general counsel's office, service operations, and the Social Security Administration.

The State Department would get $97,212,000 to expand its Voice of America, enough money to add more than 10,000 employes here and abroad. This is an increase of 20 million dollars over the amount allowed by the House. Selective Service also was given a boost of $1,115,940 over the amount al-

Calls Himself D. C. 'Sight'

Truman Lauds U. S. Employes In Talk to Postal Supervisors

President Truman, referring to himself jocularly as "one of the sights of Washington," last night denounced those who throw bricks at Government people. He said the pastime had cost him the services of able and distinguished men.

Mr. Truman spoke at a convention of the National Association of Postal Supervisors at the Statler. His appearance had not been announced in advance, and was a surprise to most of the 1600 men and women who jammed the ballroom and the adjacent corridors.

The Chief Executive explained why he deceided to drop in.

"The Postmaster General told me yesterday afternoon," he said, "that you had been in session for four days and that it had rained every day, and some of you had never been to the Capital City before and hadn't had a chance to see all the sights. And I thought maybe there was one sight that you might like to see."

He said he was much interested in the job the postal supervisors were trying to do in bringing efficiency in Government.

"It seems to me the pastime of a great many people to throw bricks at the people who have to carry on the Government's operations," he said. "It has gotten so bad here lately that it is a difficult matter to find a man who is willing to take the rough treatment he has to receive in key positions, so that sometimes I have been refused the services of able and distinguished men because they have regarded their private lives as their own—which all of us are entitled to have—and they have no private lives when they become Government employes, as you all know."

Mr. Truman recalled that when he made Jesse F. Donaldson Postmaster General, he was awarding the post to a career man for the first time.

Postmaster General Donaldson, who spoke after Mr. Truman had left, struck back at critics of the Postoffice Department.

Earlier in the day the delegates elected T. Ray Talbert of Washington as treasurer. Talbert is general supervisor of finance in the District Postoffice.

Other officers elected were: Michael C. Nave, Chicago, president; Oliver P. Mark, Dallas, first vice president; Lawrence T. Woolley, Cleveland, Okla., second vice president; Francis A. Trethewey, Scranton, Pa., third vice president, and Jesse H. Wakefield, Nashville, Tenn., secretary.

$17.2 Billion Defense Measure Is Approved by Senate Unit

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A 17.2 billion-dollar supplemental spending bill—largely to bolster America's power to oppose Communist aggression—was approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee last night.

As brought to the Senate floor for possible action today, the measure totals an estimated 450 million dollars more than voted by the House. Included are funds to fight the Korean war, and expand the military forces of the United States and our allies.

Here are the major increases voted yesterday by the Senate Committee:

Forty million dollars for naval shipbuilding—to speed the completion of an aircraft carrier, a "cruiser command ship," a submarine, a destroyer and four motor torpedo boats.

A total of $52,500,000—$25,000,000 in cash and the rest in contract authority—for construction of a new Air Engineering Development Center in Tennessee. This is contingent on passage of a pending authorization bill.

Sixty millions for administration of the new economic control law.

Six millions more for the FBI, proposed to tighten the Nation's internal security.

Another $28,500,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority to meet the extra power requirements of the expanded defense program.

An estimated $12,700,000 more to provide office space for additional Government employes in the enlarged military program.

The big appropriation bill carries about $11,750,000,000 addition for the armed forces—raising the total for fiscal 1951 to slightly more than 25 billions. An additional four billion dollars is provided for rearming Western Europe and other nations resisting Communist aggression. It meets almost fully the emergency requests made by President Truman.

The committee added about 10 million dollars to Navy funds and approximately 17 million dollars to the Army budget for additional medical and hospital care. Selective Service received an additional $1,116,000.

German Troop Issue Skirted By Ministers

Acheson Doesn't Press Point; Agreement on West's Army Put First

By Perdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The Big Three Foreign Ministers shied away from any decision at this time to use German troops in defending western Europe.

The British and French were plainly not ready for such a step now. Their people had suffered twice in a generation from German militarism, and British Foreign Secretary Bevin and French Foreign Minister Schuman here were in no mood to see Germans back in uniform, even in units of a combined Western army.

As for the Americans, Secretary Acheson and his advisers still felt convinced that German units would be needed to bring a Western defense force up to the necessary strength. One high official had estimated last week, in an unguarded moment, that western Germany could supply 10 divisions within a year if the weapons were available.

But Acheson was not disposed to press the point or to seem to be pushing the European allies. In private talks with the British and French Foreign Ministers yesterday, and again in day-long conferences on the German problem today, he was careful to explain that the United States had

Lycoming Plant To Boost Output Of Tank Engines

A major step in expansion of the Army tank production was taken yesterday with the designation of an aircraft engine company for the mass output of air-cooled tank engines.

Lycoming-Spencer division of Avco Manufacturing Corp., said an announcement from the company and Army Ordnance, has been "designated a major source of supply for tank and combat vehicle engines."

A letter of intent has been received from the Army's Detroit Tank Arsenal, it was said, directing Lycoming to start a "substantial" amount of tooling for production of a "large quantity" of large engines. While no figures were given, it is understood that the contract contemplates production of thousands of tank engines a year.

Senators Back Marshall for Defense Post

Floor Action Today On Eligibility of General for Position

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

The Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday approved a special bill to make Gen. George C. Marshall eligible for the office of Secretary of Defense.

The vote was 10 to 2, the dissenters being Senators Knowland (R., Calif.) and Cain (R., Wash.).

President Truman, who asked General Marshall to become Secretary of Defense after forcing Louis Johnson to give up the post Tuesday, sent the bill to Capitol Hill yesterday with a request for early and favorable action.

"I am a firm believer in the general principle that our defense establishment should be headed by a civilian," Mr. Truman said. "However, in view of the present critical circumstances and of General Marshall's unusual qualifications, I believe that the national interest will be served best by making an exception in this case."

As the National Security Act now stands, no person who has served as a commissioned "regular" in the armed forces within 10 years may serve as Secretary of Defense. The bill proposed by the White House would make an exception of General Marshall alone.

The House Armed Services Committee will act on the bill Friday. Representative Vinson (D., Ga.), the chairman, explained that action was postponed because several members were out of town. He said he considered the matter so important that he wanted a full turnout if possible.

Senate Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said he expected to bring the bill to the floor today or tomorrow, and added that he foresaw little difficulty in getting it passed.

Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), who criticized General Marshall last spring, said yesterday that he would vote against his nomination unless that soldier-statesman can convince him that "he learned the facts of life about communism since his disastrous mission to China."

"It should be remembered," McCarthy said, "that as a diplomat Marshall did much to lose the war which as a soldier he had done so much to win."

McCarthy said also that Con-

Radar Tracks Down 'Invader' In Mock Air Attack on D. C.

"Exercise Metro" saved Washington from a theoretical air attack yesterday afternoon.

A single B-45 jet bomber—representing an enemy armada of bombers—was tracked down by Metro's radar on the outskirts of thec ity.

Three times between 3 and 5 p. m. the plane made passes at the District—each time picked up and folowed by radar.

And each time, anti-aircraft guns in the vicinity of the passes moved across the skies, following the "armada" under simulated firing conditions.

Army observers — "umpires"—reported the plane would have been downed if shells were used.

It was the first of many such "attacks" on Washington the Thirty-Fifth Anti-Aircraft Artillery Brigade—Army group involved in the operation—will face in the war-game problem.

Concern about the attack centered around eight anti-aircraft batteries located in nearby Maryland and Virginia; 10 radar posts and 16 visual observation posts. Some of the visual stations are in Washington proper.

Public Information officers shortly after 6 p. m.—an hour or more after the last attack—announced that the "mission has been completed."

The Army has said that what it learned from Washington's Metro—there are seven others planned for various other sections of the Nation—would be used in the event of an actual alert.

Metro will continue through September 24.

Allies Open New Attack; Reds Strike Above Taegu

Offensive Due Soon And Foe Will Fold, Walker Tells Troops On Korean Front

BULLETIN

TOKYO (Thursday), Sept. 14 (AP).—Guns of American and British warships shelled Inchon on Korea's west coast 20 miles from Seoul while carrier planes raked 100 miles of coastland, the Navy announced.

This attack, more than 150 miles northwest of the Korean battlefront, occurred Wednesday—the same day that the commander of United Nations ground forces told his troops that a big U. N. offensive could be expected soon.

Far East Naval headquarters said cruisers and destroyers of Task Force 77 shelled "targets in the Inchon area." Inchon is the port for the former South Korean capital of Seoul which the Reds captured soon after they plunged across the Thirty-eighth Parallel on June 25.

Jet fighters, attack bombers and Corsair fighter-bombers from carriers ranged between the Thirty-sixth and Thirty-eighth parallels. They strafed airfields, gun emplacements and Red fortified positions. The planes flew a record 217 sorties from their flattops.

On the Korean war front, U. N. forces counterattacked today on three sectors.

By Don Huth

TOKYO (Thursday), Sept. 14 (AP). — United Nations forces, cheered by their field commander's word they soon would go on the offensive, attacked today to cement one of the few remaining chinks in their northern wall.

This push was opened about 35 miles east of Taegu, the northwestern pivot of the battle front.

Nearer to Taegu, the Reds engaged U. N. forces in seesaw fighting for hill positions and opened an artillery barrage.

Asociated Press Correspondent Bem Price reported that South Korean soldiers, backed by American planes and artillery, assaulted North Korean Reds this morning north and northwest of Kyongju. Their objective: close a 4½-mile gap just west of Angang.

Kyongju is a highway junction 35 miles east of the American base of Taegu. Red-held Angang, 10 miles north of Kyongju, is the point where the Communists achieved a dangerous breakthrough 11 days ago—then unaccountably failed to exploit it fully.

Reds Unite Near Waegwan

A United States First Cavalry Division spokesman said the Reds' sixty-fifth mechanized regiment of the 105th armored division had joined Communist forces in a bulge of the Naptong River about 10 miles south of Waegwan.

The spokesman also acknowledged that two hills, one north of Taegu and the other northwest, which were captured by Americans yesterday, were lost during last night to Red counterattacks.

In a frontline tour over muddy roads on a rainy Wednesday, Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker told U. N. troops, "We will take the offensive in a very short period of time."

Reports from around the 125-mile battle line today depicted the Reds as either pinned down, trapped, giving ground or repulsed easily in the few probing attacks they attempted.

Plane pilots this morning spotted Reds retreating north across a river in the vicinity of Yonil, south of Red-held Pohang on the east coast. It was in this general area—between Pohang and Angang—that a former West Point football

Lottery Ring Broken With Arrest of Nine

A two-million-dollar international lottery ring was smashed yesterday with the arrest by the FBI of nine men in six States.

The Justice Department said the men would be arraigned before United States commissioners on charges of interstate transportation of lottery tickets and conspiracy to violate the anti-lottery statute.

According to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, two million dollars in sweepstake tickets had been printed at Miami, Fla., and distributed to agents in Canada, New York, California, Ohio, Texas, Pennsylvania and Maryland. The sweepstakes was based on the Christmas two-year-old stakes to be run December 26 at Knutsford Park, Kingston, Jamaica. Tickets were being sold for $1.25 in the United States and $1.50 in Canada.

Tickets, Plates Seized

FBI agents at Miami in a raid Tuesday seized tickets valued at $450,000 and the printing plates. The Miami arrest and those of operators in the other States and Canada were made, the FBI said, before "any quantity" of the tickets had been sold.

The Justice Department listed those arrested as:

Carl L. Bess, described as "world agent" of the ring, who was seized at Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. The FBI said he lives at Port Sewall, Fla., and owns the Victory Hotel Arcade at Stuart, Florida.

Sam Salone, 42, of Rochester, N. Y., described as exclusive agent of the ring for sales in Canada. He was arrested at Rochester.

Beresford Sylvester Briggs Trottman, 39, of New York, where he was arrested. Trottman, a British subject, was said to have employed an FBI agent as salesman. A total of 1000 lottery books was seized from Trottman when he was arrested.

One Arrest Yields 99,600 Tickets

Joseph Corbi, 40, a Baltimore juke box and coin machine repair shop owner, who was arrested at his shop in that city. At his Baltimore home the FBI gathered up 125,000 lottery tickets priced at $1.25 each.

Michael Austerlitz, 39, arrested at Pittsburgh, where he lived with his wife and two children. At his home the FBI found 99,600 lottery tickets priced at $124,500.

Carl Angelo Rizzo, 35, an employe of the Park Oil and Gas Co., of Canton, Ohio. He was arrested at Canton, where his wife and two children live.

Serafino Camiolo, 54, also an exclusive agent for Canada, arrested at his home in Rochester, N. Y. The Justice Department said Camiolo was an ex-convict counterfeiter.

Bless was charged with interstate transportation of lottery tickets, which carries a maximum penalty of $1000 fine or two years in prison or both. The other eight were charged with conspiracy and face maximum penalties of $10,000 fines or five years in prison or both.

Tobey, Hayden Renominated; 41 House Members Successful

TEMPLE, N. H., Sept. 12 (AP).—United States Senator Charles W. Tobey today called his victory in a bitterly fought Republican primary "a victory for a forward looking brand of Republicanism."

The 70-year-old Tobey, a self-styled liberal who has frequently clashed with GOP policy makers, served notice, too, that he hoped to go back to the Senate for a third term "still a free man—ready to vote for what I think is in the interests of the people no matter who proposes it."

Tobey won renomination by only 1127 votes yesterday over Wesley Powell, 34-ear-old World War II veteran who campaigned as an admitted conservative. With the outcome decided in the final returns, Tobey polled 39,003 votes to 37,879 for Powell. The latter said he would ask for a recount.

Tobey meets Democratic National Committeemen Emmet J. Kelley in the November election. Kelley was unopposed for his party's nomination.

Another lively fight shapes up for the veteran Tobey, even though New Hampshire has not sent a Democratic Senator to Washington in 18 years.

Jubilant over his renomination after the bitterest political campaign in New Hampshire history, Tobey told newsmen:

"I like to feel, and do feel, that my victory was really a victory for a forward looking brand of Republicanism as typified by Governors Duff of Pennsylvania, Driscoll of New Jersey and Warren of California.

"I think the shadow across the Nation clearly indicates a call for this kind of leadership."

Tobey asserted he still intended to "vote my convictions." He said "The first test I apply is whether it is in the best interests of my fellow man—no matter who proposed it or where it comes from."

Five Senators Winners In Tuesday Primaries

By The Associated Press

Five Senators—three Republicans and two Democrats—have been renominated in primary elections that just about complete major party slates for Nation-wide voting November 7.

Every House member seeking renomination also was successful in Thursday's contests involving 41 House seats in eight widely scattered States, including New Hampshire, where Senator Tobey (R.) was nominated.

In Arizona Democratic Senator Carl Hayden trimmed two opponents.

Renominated without opposition were Senators Warren Magnuson (D., Wash.), George D. Aiken (R. Vt.), and Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.).

Tuesday's primaries brought at least one woman into prominence. Ana Frohmiller became Arizona's first woman nominee for Governor by capturing the Democratic nomination. As State auditor for years, she won renown in her State as "watchdog of the treasury."

Michigan Republicans picked their wartime leader, former Gov. Harry F. Kelly, to carry the banner again in the governorship race. He trimmed four opponents, including Representative Albert J. Engel.

Kelly will oppose Democratic Gov. G. Mennen Williams, who had no primary fight but ut on a vote-getting demonstration anyway. Williams drew at least 85,000 more votes in Detroit than the five Republicans combined..

In Detroit, John Lesinski, jr., led 21 oponents for the Democratic nomination to succeed his late father as a member of Congress.

The Republican nomination for lieutenant governor went to State Senator William C. Vandenberg of Holland, an avowed dry and foe of pari-mutuel betting. He is no relation to United States Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg.

Representative Engel's losing bid for Governor left his congressional seat open, and there was a brisk race for it.

To replace the retiring Representative Earl C. Michener, the Republicans chose George Meader, Ann Arbor attorney and one-time counsel for a United States Senate investigating committee. The Democratic nominee is John P. Dawson, professor of law at the University of Michigan.

Mississippi had a Democratic runoff primary which amounted to a final election. State Senator Frank Smith, 32-year-old former newspaperman, won nomination to succeeed retiring Representative Will M. Whittington.

Primary highlights in other States:

Minnesota — Republican Governor Youngdahl won renomination in a walk over four opponents.

Washington—Walter Williams, Seattle businessman won the Republican nomination to oppose Senator Magnuson. In his campaign Williams sharply criticized the Truman Administration's foreign policy.

Colorado—Democrats picked Representative John A. Carroll to oppose Senator Millikin.

300,000 Russian Troops in China, Nationalists Say

LAKE SUCCESS, Sept. 13 (NYHT.).—The Chinese Nationalists asserted here today that 300,000 Soviet troops were stationed in Communist China. They further claimed a mutual-alliance pact between Soviet Premier Josef Stalin and Chinese Communist Premier Mao Tse-tung had an annex providing for 26,252 to 67,400 Soviet advisers in Red China's military, industrial and other activities.

The estimate was made public by the Chinese News Service, a Nationalist government agency.

The Nationalists cited their own Ministry of Defense in Taipen, Formosa, as estimating 150,000 Soviet troops were in key Manchurian cities, including Dairen, Harbin, Mukden, Changchung and others. About 10,00 Soviet troops were said to have arrived in Shanghai late in May, wearing Chinese Communist uniforms.

Plan to Disperse U. S. Agencies Pigeonholed for This Session

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The President's plan to disperse key Government agencies into Maryland and Virginia was killed yesterday, at least for this session of Congress.

The Senate Appropriations Committee refused to grant the $139,800,000 sought to construct eight buildings at four unselected sites.

No vote was announced after the closed-door meeting but one Senator said the measure went down 8 to 4. Another said it lost by two votes.

Several Senators indicated the adverse vote resulted from the program being rushed up as Congress was hurrying to quit. They said the general feeling was that the whole dispersal idea as part of the national civil-defense program had not been properly studied.

The President probably will send the proposal back to Congress, perhaps after the election recess. If not then, the dispersal plan may come up again when the new Congress meets in January.

Here are some comments of committee members after the vote yesterday:

Senator Chavez (D., N. Mex.): "They didn't want to spend 139 million dollars for dispersal at this point though it might be necessary later on."

Senator Thomas (D., Okla.): "Congress might be accused of being cowards if we left Washington. Most of the members were for staying here and sticking it out."

Senator Young (R., N. Dak.): "I thought the bill came up late in the session. I might vote for it next time."

Senator Hill (D., Ala.): "I certainly would think the chances are good next session."

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.): "They didn't make a showing for spending that much money."

None of the committee members would say so for the record, but it was apparent that some were worried by Republican charges in the House that the dispersal program was merely to save the "hides" of bureaucrats and "waffle bottoms."

Hence, once the over-all civil-defense program comes before Congress, calling for Federal and to all the big cities of the country, there may be less reluctance to vote for the Capital dispersal plan.

The dispersal plan calls for the new buildings to be within an hour's driving time, or about 20 to 30 miles, from downtown Washington. The idea is to scatter the key agencies so that a single atom bomb cannot knock out the Government.

The negative action by the Appropriations Committee does not mean the money cannot be added on the Senate floor.

Four Rail Unions Are Accused Of Trying to Extort Payments

By The Associated Press

A Presidential emergency board yesterday accused four operating railroad unions of a flagrant effort "to extort the payment of hundreds of thousands of dollars" from the New York Central Railroad Co.

The charge was contained in a report to Pesident Truman which recommended that differences between the brotherhoods and the New York Central Lines east of Buffalo be submitted to the National Railroad Adjustment Board, a special adjustment board, "or arbitration."

Mr. Truman created the emergency board August 4 to investigates disputes between the carrier and employees represented by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, and the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

The disputes involves the interpretation of certain awards made by the National Railroad Adjustment Board as well as requests for changes in working rules.

The board, headed by Frank M. Swacker, New York City attorney, reported in part

"The growing practice of creating an emergency in order to bring about the appointment of an emergency board in the hope that it will make favorable recommendations concerning contentions about grievances, with no binding effect if the reverse recommendation should be made, has been roundly condemned by several emergency boards and commented on by the National Mediation Board in its annual report. In the instant case it has reached a flagrant form."

Senators Vote To Cite 3 For Contempt

By the United Press

Contempt of Congress citations for three reluctant witnesses—Earl Browder, Frederick Vanderbilt Field and Philip Jaffe—were voted unanimously yesterday by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The men refused to answer a number of questions during an investigation of alleged communism in the State Department. The citations go to the Senate for approval, thence to the Justice Department for prosecution.

The trio were quizzed by a subcommittee in connection with claims by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), that the State Department is filled with Communists and Red sympathizers.

Field, left-wing financial "angel," and Jaffe, key figure in the Amerasia stolen secrets case, refused to answer questions about their alleged Communist connections on grounds they might incriminate themselves. They also refused to say whether they knew some of the targets of McCarthy's attacks.

Browder refused to answer some questions although he did not plead constitutional immunity. He declined to say whether some of the persons under criticism were Communists.

Jaffe was managing editor of the magazine Amerasia, which figured in a 1945 stolen documents case. He was convicted of illegal possession of classified Federal papers and paid a fine.

The Foreign Relations Subcommittee which investigated McCarthy's charges, was headed by Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.). Its majority—all Democrats—called the charges a "fraud" on Congress and the public.

Breast Milk Substitute Is Announced

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (U.P.).—Development of a new "synthetic breast milk" for new-born infants was disclosed today in a report by three doctors in the New York State Journal of Medicine.

The new preparation has been given to 171 new-born infants and 39 older babies and found to be better in many cases than mother's milk. The report was made by Drs. Harry L. Litchfield, Robert Norton and Charles Hoffman, all of Brooklyn and associated with the Department of Pediatrics, Beth-el Hospital.

The milk, known by the trademark name of Bremil, does not have a cow's milk base. It is made up entirely of the essential vitamins, amino acids, fats, proteins and carbohydrates needed for an infant's nourishment.

The Brooklyn doctors said that the new preparation has the same amount of fat as human milk, and also equals human milk in protein content, amino acids and carbohydrates, and exceeds it in vitamin content.

"Of the new-borns fed exclusively on the powdered synthetic breast milk, 70.5 percent regained their birth weight by the end of six and one-half days," the report said. "This was far superior to those infants who were fed solely on maternal milk or the control group fed on a formula of six fluid ounces of evaporated milk, 12 fluid ounces of boiled water and two tablespons of carbohydrate."

The product is available now in Texas and New England and will be distributed nationally within a few weeks.

Angry Alaska Governor Blasts Schoeppel 'Communist' Charge

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Angry as a sourdough whose claim has been jumped, Governor Ernest Gruening of Alaska yesterday gave Senator Andrew F. Schoeppel (R., Kans.) a piece of his mind.

The provocation for the Governor's fury was a speech Schoeppel made to the Senate on September 5. It insinuated that Gruening and Interior Secretary Oscar L. Chapman had Red leanings or associations, and that there was some sort of Communist tie-up in Alaska's campaign for statehood.

Those remarks, Gruening testified to a Senate committee, constitute "one of the greatest collections of misstatements it has ever been my misfortune to read."

In particular, Gruening took offense at that part of Schoeppel's speech referring to the possible coming to power in Alaska of "American Quislings" who might be "serving the purposes of Soviet Russia."

"The implication that (Alaskan) Government authorities are Communists or Quislings," Gruening said, "is as false, unwarranted and unjustified as possible. While those statements did not refer to me directly, it seems to me that anyone mentioned in that speech is smeared."

And anyone making it, he went on, "should be compelled by common decency and honor" to prove it.

Schoeppel Attempts No Defense

Schoeppel, who attended the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee investigation being conducted as a result of his speech, attempted no defense of his remarks. He declared, however, that Gruening was mistaken in reading any such implication in his address. Schoeppel was not referring to the Governor of Alaska, he insisted.

Whom he was referring to, however, he did not explain.

Gruening cited his record as a newspaper publisher and Government official to demonstrate that he was fervently anti-Communist.

Both he and another witness yesterday, Robert Atwood, head of the Alaskan Statehood Committee, defended the hiring of Randolph Feltus by the committee as public relations adviser.

They said they considered him a good, loyal American. Schoeppel had charged that he had once been employed as public relations counsel by the Polish Ambassador here.

Atwood said the salmon fishing industry and other enemies of statehood for Alaska were spending large amounts lobbying against statehood, and it was felt some counteroffensive was needed. Hence Feltus was retained.

Atwood said the opponents of statehood pay relatively low taxes now but fear higher levies if the Territory becomes a State.

Loyalty Oaths Produced

After their testimony, Mastin G. White, Solicitor of the Interior Department, gave the Senate Committee photostats of loyalty oaths signed by Reclamation Commissioner Michael W. Straus, in 1941 and 1946.

Schoeppel had charged that Straus had the loyalty paragraph stricken from his oath when he was sworn in as Commissioner in 1945. He made a similar accusation against Secretary Chapman.

As Chapman previously testified, and as yesterday's documents on Straus showed, both men—in common with Washington custom—took only the oath of office at their ceremonial, formal swearing-in performances. Both had previously signed the loyalty affidavits privately.

This was something Schoeppel might have found out, Chapman pointed out last week, had the Senator bothered to telephone the Interior Department before making his speech.

Senate Unit Backs Choice Of O'Dwyer

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee brushed aside isolated objections yesterday and approved the nomination of former Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York, to be the United States Ambassador to Mexico.

The committee vote was 8 to 0, with Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) abstaining. The nomination goes to the Senate for certain confirmation, probably today.

O'Dwyer showed up at the start of the session, was questioned briefly by Hickenlooper about a 1945 New York grand jury statement, then was excused. He left immediately to resume an interrupted California vacation.

Hickenlooper questioned O'Dwyer Tuesday about claims he enriched himself as a city official.

The charges were made by Henry V. Poor, GOP candidate for the House seat of Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt (D-Lib., N. Y.). He told the committee O'Dwyer showed a "zeal for financial enrichment at the public expense" by obtaining a raise in salary while mayor from $25,000 to $40,000.

The only other opposition came from Clendenin Ryan, independent candidate for the job O'Dwyer vacated. He said the former mayor had been able to "keep things quiet too long," and demanded a public hearing.

Va. 'Flunkees' Face 2d Draft Mental Test

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Virginia draftees who were rejected by the Army for flunking in mental qualification exams face the possibility of a second test, it was learned yesterday.

Col. Asher W. Harman, State Director of Selective Service, disclosed yesterday that he has been discussing with officials of the Virginia Military District means of reducing the abnormally high rate of mental test failures among the Commonwealth's draftees.

The State Selective Service and military authorities, Colonel Harman said, have just about agreed on two approaches to the problem: a review of the mental qualification tests, and a recall of draftees who flunked for a second test.

Seventy-two percent of Virginia's draftees rejected by the Army failed the mental qualification.

The State Selective Service chief has charged that some of the failures might well have been deliberate, and that anyhow, the tests were eliminating men who could perform a job in the armed forces. Colonel Harmon has generally been supported in his belief by the national draft director, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey.

In the District, the mental test failures account for one-third of the rejected draftees, a proportion which has been described as "alarming" by Frank D. Norton, local deputy draft director. Norton said yesterday his office is considering taking action similar to that being proposed in Virginia.

On Capitol Hill, the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday made public testimony by General Hershey that he expects some 500,000 men will be drafted by next July 1. Such a draft call would mean a quota of 2500 for the District; 7500 for Maryland; 10,650 for Virginia. Thus far, the Army has called for only 170,000 men.

Meanwhile, at the Army's induction station at Arlington Farms, Va., Washington's second contingent of Korean war draftees was taken into the service. Fifty men were inducted in a brief ceremony; one draftee was rejected because of asthma.

Deputy Draft Director Norton wished the draftees godspeed on behalf of the District government. The District Department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars provided a color guard.

15 Arlington Men To Be Inducted Tuesday

The following 15 men from Arlington Board No. 9 will report for induction next Tuesday to Arlington Farms:

Edward McCormick, 24, of 1727 N. Veitch st.; Roy Nedwards, 24, of 1114 S. Quinn st.; Donald Roadhouse, 24, of 2819 S. 12th st.; August Gaupp, 24, of 631 S. Quincy st.; Alexander Yourshaw, 25, of 855 N. Jefferson st.; Eugene Appleton, 24, of 221 Gundry dr., Falls Church (a former Arlington resident still registered with its board);

Ralph Taylor, 24, of 5237 N. 5th st.; William Henry, 24, of 924 S. 22d st.; Robert Peake, 24, of 2701 Lee blvd.; Harry McPherson, 24, of 838 S. Quincy st.; Bernard Arndt, 23, of 2009 N. Nelson st.; Frank Darcey, 23, of 3911 S. 9th st.; Benjamin Armstrong, 23, of 3521 S. Kemper dr.; Charles Dangerfield, 22, of 1707 S. 13th rd.; and Harold Milstead, 22, of 817 N. Irving st.

'Always Rescued'

Marine Slur Is Applauded By Red Fleet

MOSCOW, Sept. 13 (U.P.).—The Soviet navy publication, Red Fleet, today strongly indorsed President Truman's description of the United States Marines as a police force.

Red Fleet said that, although President Truman's sincerity normally is of the most dubious, this time he blurted out the truth.

(President Truman later withdrew the statement and apologized to the Marines.)

An article by Capt. A. Kudryavtsen, said that aside from police duty the Marines never distinguished themselves in real battles in either the First or Second World Wars. They were always rescued by the regular infantry, the captain said, and now, like other American troops, they are being licked in Korea.

Kudryavtsev cited this recruiting poster, which he said decorated American highways: "Young Yankee! The earth is an American planet. You can choose what you like—tropical Guam, snowy Iceland, Britain, Greece. The military profession insures a rich, adventurous life, travel and friendships."

Naturally, the captain commented, such posters attract cutthroats and gangsters.

Congress May Not Get Away

and basic security measures wrapped up in the bill "constitutional" but question the legality of the registration features. This informant said the President could let the courts determine the validity of the registration plan by asking the Justice Department to produce a quick test case.

A group of Republicans and Southerners in the House and Senate meanwhile have served notice they will not vote for adjournment until they know what the President is going to do about the anti-Red measure. Predicting a Congressional over-rider if the President quickly vetoes the bill, they said it might die by "pocket veto" if they left town.

Eberharter Heads Move

The independent move to force action this session on an excess profits tax is headed by Representative Herman P. Eberharter (D., Pa.) and three other members of the House Ways and Means committee.

Despite leadership warnings against tying a "quickie" profits tax to the emergency revenue measure, Eberharter announced he will try to get the House to open the tax rule to amendments, and then offer alternative motions.

His first motion, which Speaker Sam Rayburn is expected to rule out of order, would authorize House conferees to work out a profits tax in conference with the Senate.

His alternative motion, which may be harder to rule out, would amend a provision of the Senate bill calling on the taxing committees to report back a profits levy next year, to require such a report this year.

"Immediate Acion" Sought

A group of 32 House Republicans led by Representative Clifford P. Case (R., N. J.) meanwhile called on the Ways and Means committee to schedule an excess profits tax "for immediate action."

Saying they would vote against adjournment until this is done, their statement added:

"Some of us intend even to vote against sending the pending tax bill to conference unless the Democratic leadership gives positive assurance that Congress will not adjourn before voting on an excess profits tax bill."

House-Senate conferees in informal talks yesterday prepared for quick agreement on basic tax bill provisions in case there is no excess profits tax upset. House conferees were ready to accept without major change the Senate's $2,700,000,000 increase in individual taxes and $1,500,000,000 pickup in corporate taxes. They were divided on some of the Senate's loophole-plugging provisions, however.

Police Reserve Corps to Enlist 5000 for Civil Defense Work

Civil defense units of the Metropolitan Police Department Reserve Corps will be set up in all branches of the department and women will be eligible for certain jobs, Acting District Defense Director John E. Fondahl said yesterday.

On Tuesday, after the District Commissioners had approved the police project, police officials said they would first recruit and train on a precinct level only.

However, Fondahl said Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett yesterday decided to proceed at once with original plans and start the civil defense program at precinct and headquarters units at the same time.

This means civilians will be trained for emergency police duty in the detective bureau, traffic division, women's bureau and other special units, Fondahl said.

Reserves for the entire department are expected to number between 4000 and 5000 at full strength, he said.

Fondahl also released some details of what it will take to qualify for the reserve corps.

Applicants must be between the ages of 21 and 55, he said. Minimum height for men will be 5½ feet; for women, five feet.

Persons joining precinct units must live in the precinct or work there and live nearby. There will be no residence restrictions on persons joining special headquarters units, he said.

Applicants will be required to take an oath of allegiance, Fondahl said. They will be checked for possible police records and good character, he said. All must be in good physical and mental health.

Fondahl said an order officially starting the program will probably go out today or Friday. Barrett has said recruiting will start in a week or two.

Senate Unit Knocks Out Rider On U. S. Jobs Voted by House

lowed by the House to enlarge its administrative staff.

A second personnel rider approved by the Senate committee would direct the FBI to make loyalty checks of persons hired by the State Department to handle the Point 4 program aimed at aiding undeveloped areas.

Text of Senate Rider

The text of the committee's over-all rider follows:

"After September 1, 1950, and during the fiscal year 1951: (a) The names of all persons to be terminated under reductions in force in all departments and agencies of the Government shall be certified as eligible for appointment to positions in agency programs determined by the President to be related directly to national defense, if qualified, at not to exceed the grade and salary last held in the terminating agency or department. (b) The Department of Defense is authorized to call on other departments or agencies for such additional personnel as it may require within the limits of its funds."

As proposed, the rider would wipe out the temporary promotions, transfers, and reinstatements made to classified jobs since September 2. It would allow Civil Service and the agencies to handle them in a regular manner. In addition, the Senate rider would apply to all Federal jobs, classified, postal and per diem. It won't be fought by the Administration.

Meantime, the Civil Service Commission has extended authority to the Commerce Department to make temporary indefinite appointments to its defense jobs. The House rider directed the commission to make "full use" of its temporary appointing power for the duration.

Poland Protests U. S. Treatment Of the 'Batory'

Poland protested to the United States yesterday that American authorities are "discriminating" against the Polish liner Batory in New York Harbor.

Polish Ambassador Josef Winiewicz complained at the State Department that the liner's crew is not permitted ashore and is exposed to "chicanery" (trickery) when questioned by United States immigration authorities.

He said visitors are barred from the ship and passengers are inconvenienced by special and prolonged Coast Guard inspection.

The Batory is the ship on which Communist Gerhart Eisler fled to Europe last year while out under bond following his conviction of contempt of Congress.

Ambassador Winiewicz said the attitude of the American authorities "prepared and encouraged" the longshoremen who recently refused to unload the liner's cargo, which he said was of Polish and Danish commercial goods.

Winiewicz said in a statement that "should the discriminatory practices continue, the Polish government will feel compelled to take appropriate measures."

GI Wounded In Action; 2d Is Injured

A Washington soldier has been seriously wounded in action and another has been injured in Korea.

In both cases the families learned of the casualties by telephone calls.

Pfc. John W. Goodman, 23, son of Mrs. Hazel Goodman, 622 Evarts st. ne., called his mother from San Francisco on Tuesday and told her of his wounds.

Mrs. Goodman said her son told her he was wounded in both legs, and in his arm and side. He had been off the plane which brought him back from Korea only a few moments when he made the telephone call, she said.

Goodman, who wrote to his mother September 1 that he had dup up "half of Korea" trying to get a big enough foxhole, was born in Washington and graduated from Chamberlain Vocational high school here.

A World War II veteran who served 18 months with the Army of Occupation in Germany, Goodman reenlisted in October, 1949, and was sent to Korea in July.

Pfc. Goodman Corpl. Devan

His mother, who is employed by the Veterans Administration, has five other children and is a widow of a World War I veteran.

Corpl. Richard Devan, 27, son of Mrs. Winifred Richards Devan, 3020 43d st. nw, called his family from Tokyo on Sunday but the connection was bad and his mother could get no details.

Corporal Devan, who served three years in the Merchant Marine during World War II, was slightly injured on August 30.

Born in Plainfield, N. J., he graduated from high school in Hampton, Va., and attended St. John's College in Annapolis. He was working for the New York Times when he was drafted in 1948.

Rear Admiral's Son Killed in Action

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 13 (AP)—Marine Lieut. John H. Carson, jr., son of Real Admiral John H. Carson, commander of the Atlantic Training Command at Norfolk, Va., has been killed in action in Korea, service friends said today.

The 26-year-old lieutenant was serving with the First Marine Division, which was rushed to Korea soon after the fighting started.

A graduate of Duke University, he served as a Marine lieutenant in World War II and afterward returned to civilian life. He was called back to active duty early this year.

In addition to his father, Carson leaves his widow and a young son who reside at Pendleton, Calif., and a brother, Midshipman Ralph S. Carson at the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md.

Nationwide Strikes Threatening Finland

HELSINKI, Finland, Sept. 13 (U.P.).—Finland's biggest post-war strike wave threatened today to paralyze her export industries and ruin her economy.

More than 100,000 workers already were on strike in three industries, almost as many more were scheduled to walk out by the end of the month and thousands of others in allied industries have been forced into idleness because of lack of materials.

To make matters worse, labor unions hold their elections in December and Socialist leaders, who control them, are trying to out-do each other in making demands on industry.

The right-of-center government, which still has war powers including drafting of workers, has hesitated to use those powers so far. The former Socialist government used them last year to break a Communist-called general strike.

Specifically, what the workers want are bonuses and pay raises to make up for the rise in the cost of living due to inflation.

The World Bank yesterday loaned seven million dollars to Ethiopia, the first bank loan to any country in Africa.

The bank said five million dollars will be needed to rehabilitate the Ethiopian road system.

The loan is for 20 years at 3 percent interest rate, repayment to begin in 1956.

U. S. 'White Paper' Charges Soviets Provoke Tension

LONDON, Sept. 13 (U.P.).—The United States today distributed throughout western Europe a "white paper," accusing the Soviet Union of spreading widely the "fiction" of an imminent Russian attack on Yugoslavia.

The charge was one of many made in a paper entitled "Soviet Aggression in Europe and U. S. Countermoves." It was distributed by the United States Information Service, as part of its stepped-up propaganda counter-attack against Russia.

The paper also declared that Russia "periodically incites border tension" with its neighbor, Iran, through actual or rumored troop maneuvers and provokes unrest among Iranian tribesmen.

The White Paper opened with a list of Soviet aggression in all the European and Middle Eastern countries along its border, including those that Russia has converted into satellites.

The general charges were that "within less than a month after Yalta" the Soviet Union abandoned even the limited cooperation with the West which prevailed during the war. It directly violated the Yalta agreements on eastern Europe at once, the paper said.

"At Potsdam," the paper said, "the Soviet Union presented demands which fully revealed its intention of pursuing a policy of aggression in postwar Europe."

In the secton on Yugoslavia, the paper summarized the Soviet action against Marshal Tito's government since the Cominform break and included in its list of Soviet moves:

"Widespread use of rumors spreading the fiction of Soviet attack on Yugoslavia, marching of Soviet units up and down along Yugoslavia's border with Romania and Hungary; use of Macedonia as a weapon against the continued stability of the Tito regime."

Senate Approves Bill To Expand Coast Guard

The Senate approved unanimously and sent to the House yesterday a bill to expand the Coast Guard for protection of United States ports.

The measure would bring the Coast Guard under the Selective Service System and permit it to accept draftees. It also would authorize the President to order reserves to active duty for 21 months and extend current enlistments for one year.

Bill to Strengthen FBI Is Approved by Senate

The Senate yesterday passed and sent to the House a bill to strengthen the FBI's hand in countering espionage and sabotage offenses.

It would enable FBI agents to make arrests without warrant for any Federal offense committed in their presence and for felonies, if the agent has "reasonable grounds" to believe a felony is involved. This is the same "arrest without warrant" power now held by United States marshals.

Humiliation Fund For OSS Officer Voted by Senate

The Senate yesterday approved a bill to pay $21,948 to Charles J. Trees of Indianapolis, former OSS Lieutenant Colonel convicted of misappropriating Government property.

The conviction was set aside by the Secretary of War after Trees claimed he was found guilty on perjured evidence. He also said he was not given adequate defense counsel or allowed witnesses.

The bill has to be reapproved by the House and signed by President Truman before Trees receives the "humiliation" money.

U. S. Dollars' Flow Swells Czechs' Till

PRAGUE, Sept. 13 (U.P.) — The United States Government is putting more than $200,000 annually in the dollar-short treasury of Communist Czechoslovakia, and private American citizens of Czech descent are pumping in millions more.

The United States Government has a "payroll" in Czechoslovakia of thousands of Czechs who receive social security benefits, veterans' pensions, bonuses or some other kind of American Government payments. All told, these payments amount to at least $200,000 yearly, United States officials report.

In addition, thousands of Americans of Czech descent or birth will their estates or send help to relatives in the "old country." Officials here say "certainly several millions" are involved.

The situation is emphasized by the fact that many of the dollar remitments could be avoided by paying the Czech beneficiaries out of the enormous blocked account of Czech crowns at the disposal of the United States Embassy here.

This account of almost seven million dollars was built up from payments for surplus arms and goods the United States Army left in Czechoslovakia in 1945. It cannot be converted into dollars, but can be spent locally by the United States Embassy or other official United States Government offices.

Officials say the "sensible way" would be to make all United States Government payments to individual Czechs out of the blocked account, and to persuade as many as possible of the Czechs in the United States to convert their money there rather than sending dollars here.

The Czech beneficiary would get the legal rate of 50 crowns to the dollar, but the Communist government would not get the dollar itself.

But United States Treasury officials have, in effect, said "no" to this idea because they feel the blocked account is an Embassy affair and therefore all bookkeeping, check writing and conversion of currency should be done in Washington.

Three-Party Greek Cabinet Is Given Oath

ATHENS, Sept. 13 (AP)—Premier Sophocles Venizelos and a three-party coalition Cabinet were sworn in at noon today.

Constantin Tsaldaris, Populist (Royalist) leader, and George Papandreou, Social Democrat—the other two members of the triumvirate that controls a substantial majority in Parliament—are vice premiers and ministers without portfolio.

Venizelos, Liberal Party leader, also became Foreign Affairs minister.

Ater his inauguration, Venizelos broadcast an appeal to the Greek people to support him in his "difficult task."

Because of the tense international situation and the threat of a "treacherous rebellion" within Greece, Venizelos said three parties had buried their differences in behalf of the nation's interest.

This was the new cabinet:

Liberal Party—Stavros Costopoulos, finance; Evangelos Averoff, national economy; Phocion Zaimis, welfare and reconstruction; Napoleon Zervas, public works; Nicholas Bakopoulos, education; Leonidas Iassonides, minister governor-general northern Greece.

Populist Party—Sophano Stephanopoulos, coordination; Constantine Rodopoulos, minister without portfolio, undersecretary of press information; Dimitrios Iannopoulos, merchant marine; Miltiades Mnadas, labor; Constantine Karamanlis, national defense; Constantine Kalkanis, post and telegraph.

Social Democrats—Elias Lagakos, justice; Nicholas Excharcos, transport; Andreas Lambropoulos, agriculture; Augustus Theologhites, public works.

Drowned U. S. Flier Had Knife Wound

NORWICH, England, Sept. 13 (U.P.)—A coroner's inquest was told today that an American flier found drowned in the Wensum River near Norwich had an incised wound over his right eye and an open clasp knife in his pocket.

Circumstances of finding the body of Staff Sergt. Paul Leslie Murphy, 34-year-old Air Force gunner from Des Moines, Iowa, were described by a policeman. Coroner Leonard Hill said the inquest was designed only to determine that Murphy was a member of the United States armed forces. He issued a death certificate providing for return of the body to the United States.

Still Tighter Belts For British People

LONDON, Sept. 13 (U.P.).—Britain wearied by 11 years of shortages and the world's highest taxes was told today that the new $9,520,000,000 rearmament program will pull the economic straitjacket even tighter.

Minister for Economic Affairs Hugh Gaitskell, reporting to the special session of Parliament, said in none too optimistic words what the increase of arms production and increase in the armed forces will mean.

He said it will mean continued and perhaps more price control. He said Britain will have to continue to sell its best clothing, whisky and motor cars to foreign buyers and push those sales even higher. He asked housewives to cut down on use of electricity.

Gaitskell left to Sir Stafford Cripps, for whom he substituted today, to deal with how the money will be raised. Authoritative quarters said the expected reduction of the income-tax burden probably will not be made. British taxes are about 50 percent, as compared with America's 25 percent.

Gaitskell made it clear that Britain did not intend to go into an all-out war footing. The vital problem of exports, which for the past six months have shown a healthy margin over imports, will share the same priority with defense, he said.

"The government has asked all firms, large and small not to accept arms orders which would mean the abandonment or postponement of high priority exports" without first checking with the government, he said.

Answering criticism that Britain has not moved in pace with the United States in imposing economic controls, Gaitskell said: "What the United States is now contemplating for the most part already exists in this country."

97-Pound Redhead Claims Parked-Car Win Over Matman

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 13 (AP).—A 97-pound redhead told deputies today that she won an unscheduled bout with a six-foot-three-inch 270-pound wresler who sports a page-boy bob.

Furthermore, Evalyn Ruth Sloann, 23, a Hollywood private detective, wants Arbie Cleghorn, 35, prosecuted for conduct unbecoming a gentleman in a parked car.

Miss Sloann, a judo expert, said that Cleghorn tried some holds on her that are barred and strictly ungentlemanly. But, she told deputies: "I clamped a few arm bars on him. That cooled him off."

Cleghorn, an operatic student who bills himself as "the Plagiacci of the ring," told reporters. "She insisted on sitting on my lap." He denied that she used any judo holds on him or that he attempted to attack her.

The sheriff's office said they will arrest the wrestler for assault with intent to commit rape.

British Move To Ban Arms Shipments

LONDON, Sept. 13 (AP).—Winston Churchill called on Parliament tonight to urge the Labor government to stop exporting "heavy machine tools and strategic raw materials" to possible aggressors.

The Conservative leader introduced this motion for debate next Monday:

"That this House urges His Majesty's government to suspend the export of heavy machine tools and strategic raw materials that would add to the war potential of possible aggressors or which we or our Allies require for our own defense."

A vote is expected on the motion.

The move is obviously another step in Churchill's campaign to force the government to call off the sale of tools and other machinery to the Soviet Union.

Prime Minister Attlee, however, has told the Nation that Britain was taking care to see that no tools or machinery were being sold that were essential to this country's defense preparations.

Official sources reported that Britain has halted the supply of high-priority arms to all countries outside the Atlantic Pact group and the British Commonwealth.

Egypt has been informed that contracts for British jet-propelled aircraft and other short supply materials needed to stiffen the defenses of the Western Allies have been temporarily suspended, the informant added. Other countries believed affected by the general ban include Sweden, Greece, Turkey, Jordan and Iraq.

The ban applies to those countries which have been receiving arms from Great Britain or which have placed orders for such high priority material. The Soviet Union does not have orders for arms nor has it been receiving any from this country.

Allies Launch Drive To Close Gap in Line

His Troops Trapped Reds

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

BRIG. GEN. GAR DAVIDSON, former West Point football star, is the leader of the United Nations task force that closed a trap on 3000 North Koreans northwest of Kyongju yesterday. Davidson was head football coach at the Military Academy from 1933 to 1937 star led a task force in closing a trap today on 3000 Reds.

At the southern end of the front, Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton said a Red attack at 8:30 a. m. (7:30 p. m., EDT, Wednesday) overran a platoon of the United States Twenty-fifth Divson. The Americans immediately launched a counter-attack. Swinton said the battle was continuing.

Two smaller attacks early today were beaten in the same sector. One attack was against a bitterly contested hill overlooking the Nam River where it flows into the Naktong.

Swington said fresh troops of the Twenty-Fifth who just had moved into position drove the Reds back in a brisk but small action.

Red Platoon is Repulsed

A Red platoon struck at the extreme southern flank of the Twenty-Fifth's line but was easily repulsed. The Twenty-Fifth defends positions 35 miles west of the lifeline port of Pusan.

The weather improved slightly today for the Airforce which was limited by rainstorms yesterday to 240 sorties.

Maj. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, commander of the Far East Air Force's bomber command, reported today that practically all major military industrial targets on his list "have now been neutralized."

Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, commanding general of FEAF, after assessing the report, said the Reds' "heavy industry has been severely crippled by an estimated 75 percent destruction of assigned targets."

Today's North Korean communique acknowledged "stubborn resistance" around Taegu and said the U. N. forces "have received reinforcements in troops and equipment."

In fighting talk to his frontline troops, Walker declared:

"Soon we are going to give up the atitude of defense . . . As soon as we start forward and break the crust in front of us the enemy will fold.

"We can feel a weakening of the enemy now . . . In some positions they actually are pulling out."

But part of the enemy force that scored the recent break through on the northern front did not pull out fast enough.

Brig. Gen. Gar Davidson, former West Point football star and coach, led a task force in a swift, sudden drive from the region of the east coast port of Pohang. It caught the enemy east of Kyongju. Kyongju is 15 miles southwest of Pohang.

The flying column stormed over three ridges in rugged country which Davidson said "was strictly something a billygoat would have trouble climbing."

The task force found its greatest opposition on the third and last ridge. Davidson called for air support and allied warplanes seared the ridge with jellied gasoline fire-bombs and machine-gun fire.

The Reds broke. Remnants were trying to flee over the peaks to the northwest—the only way out left for them. The mountain corridor down which they had come was stopped up by the task force.

Davidson's smash through the enemy line gave a lift to the allied defenders of the northern front.

Reds Muff Chance to Advance

Why the Reds failed to exploit the advantage of their big breakthrough is "one of the major mysteries of the war," Associated Press Correspondent Bem Price reported from the front. Price said the allied situation there on September 3 and 4 was "desperate."

The trapping of the Reds relieved, but did not eliminate, the Red threat to the Pohang airstrip. On the extreme easa coast, the North Korean Fifth Division poured heavy mortar and artillery fire on South Korean Third Division forces protecting the strip.

The Eighth Division's 12-mile drive in three days, plus a shorter advance by a Republican regiment moving northwest from Kyongju, marked the biggest Allied gain since American infantrymen and Marines chased the Reds from the Naktong River bulge in late August.

Naktong-Nam Sector Quiet

On the southwest front, United States artillery caught North Koreans trying to take a hill near Masan and killed 200 of them, a front dispatch said. The Naktong River and Nam River fronts—the west wall of the U. N. defense area—were generally quiet Wednesday, an Eighth Army spokesman said.

General MacArthur's headquarters passed up its communique early Thursday. This usually is a sign that there has been little recent action.

Flare Lighting Aids Fliers

A Far East Air Forces spokesman said a new technique of flare-lighting was proving highly successful in attacks against Communist road convoys.

B-26 light bombers in pairs drop flares along the convoys. Another pair of bombers makes a bombing and strafing run on the illuminated convoy ond drops more flares to light up the convoy for the first two planes for their strike.

The spokesman said also that fighter-bombers now salvo eight rockets at once against Red tanks, instead of making one or two rocket passes. The impact of the eight rockets, he said, "disintegrates" the Russian-made T-3R tanks.

The air spokesman said three made-in-Russia Yak fighter planes were destroyed and another damaged Tuesday on the Pyongyang airfield. This brought the total of Red plane wreckage to 83 destroyed and 24 damaged.

Typhoon weather limited air operations along the front but 60 Superforts attacked communications in North Korea.

Allies Close Trap on Reds

Associated Press Wirephoto Map

IN NORTH—Allied forces (A) trapped 3000 Reds on the northern front yesterday to climax their biggest gains in a month. North of Taegu (B) United Nations troops captured two hill positions and advanced against two others. In the southwest (C) 200 North Koreans were killed in an unsuccessful attack on an Allied hill position

Planes Blast 71 Red Tanks With Rockets

The Air Force said yesterday that planes salvoing eight armor-piercing rockets at a time destroyed 71 North Korean tanks from September 1 to September 12.

Lieut. Gen. George Stratemeyer, commander of the Far Eastern Air Forces, has made his report to Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff. The report said the confirmed score during the period was 71 tanks destroyed and 73 damaged.

Stratemeyer said these victories were scored by planes of the Fifth Air Force.

An Air Force sokesman said these results indicate that the Air Force's new tactic of firing all eight of a plane's rockets simultaneously is proving more effective than anything else tried to date.

He said both F-80 jet fighters and F-51 piston engine fighters are salvoing 6.5-inch rockets equipped with shaped charge heads. The shaped charge is an explosive shaped to focus its effect and thus blast through heavy armor.

Beer for Boys in Korea Touches Off House Row

A beer-for-the-boys-in-Korea controversy foamed up on Capitol Hill yesterday.

On one side, Representative Dingell (D., Mich.) proposed a daily beer ration for every fighting man in the House—at the taxpayers' expense, that is.

On the other side, Representative Bryson (D., S. C.) urged that everybody—soldiers and civilians alike—go on the wagon for the duration.

Both proposals came on the morning after an Army order in Tokyo stopped the distribution of a can a beer a day, for free, to every combat man who wanted one. It seems there had been complaints from some people back home.

Army officials quickly modified the ban after howls of anguish arose. Hereafter, no beer will be bought with public funds. But the can-a-day system will continue—for front-line troops only—and will be financed from such sources as post exchange profits.

This didn't satisfy Dingell.

"Water in Korea is deadlier than bullets," he declared, and went on to list the maladies that might overtake a confirmed water drinker—typhus . . . cholera . . . dysentery.

Bryson contended nobody should touch the stuff—beer, that is—in times like these. He already has introduced a bill to outlaw alcoholic beverages in time of emergency. He says it would save materials and manpower as well as cut absenteeism among workers.

Msgr. Sheen To New Post

pressed reluctance at leaving Catholic University.

He said his "appointment comes at a time when the world has suddenly become missionary minded. The two great missionary movements which campaign for mankind are communism and Christianity. . . .

"The secret of world peace," he said, "is conversion of the world to the Truth and Love of Christ. There is no danger from the atomic bomb; there is danger from atomic men. Our problem is not atomic control, but human control; that is, the perfection and enlightenment of men who would drop lethal death on their fellowmen. This is basically a missionary problem. . . ."

The 55-year-old priest was a preacher at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York City for a long period. While on the NBC Catholic Hour for more than two decades, his voice became familiar to millions.

The announcement of his appointment came from His Eminence Pietro Cardinal Fumasoni-Biondi, head of the Sacred Congregation of the Propagation of the Faith, which directs the world efforts of the society from Rome. Msgr. Sheen succeeds the Most Rev. Thomas J. McDonnell, Auxiliary bishop of New York, who had been director for 14 years.

Prayers Urged For Conversion Of Soviet Russia

Catholics were urged to pray for the conversion of Soviet Russia to Christianity by two priests speaking at services yesterday at St. Patrick's Church.

Attended by overflow crowds, the services commemorated the apparition of the Blessed Virgin to three peasant children near Fatima, Portugal, on September 13, 1917.

The Rev. John Ryan, S.J., of Baltimore, referred in the noon services to the growing devotion to Our Lady of Fatima in every part of the world.

At the late afternoon service, the Rev. William Hill, S.S., also of Baltimore, said that the Blessed Virgin's message at Fatima is "at once a warning and a promise." The warning is that if men continue to offend God, war and the spread of communism will be inevitable.

3 Organizations In Mental Health Field Are Merged

Final merging of the Nation's three leading voluntary organizations in the mental health field to form the National Association for Mental Health, Inc., was announced yesterday.

The corporations joined together were the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, the National Mental Health Foundation, and the Psychiatric Foundation. Headquarters for the new association are at 1790 Broadway, New York City.

Its officers include Oren Root, New York attorney, as president; Dr. George S. Stevenson, psychiatrist, of New York, as medical director, and Arthur H. Bunker, president of the Climax-Molybdenum Corporation, as chairman of the board of directors.

Philippines Labor Chief Flees, Joins 'Huks' in Hills

MANILA, Sept. 13 (AP).—While police searched for him, General Secretary Alfredo B. Saulo of the Philippines Congress of Labor Organizations announced today he has joined the Communist Hukbalahap armed peasants.

Saulo and Filipino Communist Party Leaders Mariano P. Balgos and Guillermo Capadocia were indicted last night on charges of inciting rebellion. While officials were preparing the complaint Saulo was talking to newsmen in his office. A few minutes before officers arrived with the warrant Saulo disappeared.

In a statement delivered by courier to Manila newspapers today, Saulo said he fled because he had information "from an unimpeachable source that the Quirino administration has ordered his triggermen to murder me."

Senate Unit Approves Marshall

gress should exact a promise from General Marshall that he "will listen to (General) MacArthur's advice on the Far East."

In the aftermath of Mr. Truman's dismissal of Secretary Johnson, there was much speculation about what it was exactly that led him to take the step after saying in August that he wouldn't. What, it was being asked, was the overt act?

Those who ought to know said that they doubted if Mr. Truman's move was based on any single offense. They thought, rather, that it was an accumulation of things, the piling up of which finally became intolerable in the eyes of the President.

On one thing associates of Mr. Truman were agreed. What prompted him to dump Johnson in the end, they said, was his conviction that Johnson was carrying on a vendetta against Secretary of State Acheson. Mr. Truman admires Acheson—for his loyalty among other virtues—and he doesn't like members of his official family to get out of step on foreign policy, which he has made clear is not made by the Department of State but by himself.

Secretary Johnson, in his zeal to build up good will and help his department's legislative program, did not hesitate to invite foes of the Administration to sit down to meals with him in his Pentagon office.

Among those reported to have been his guests were Republicans and writers who are downright obnoxious to the White House.

As for Johnson's successor-elect, General Marshall, the Capitol yesterday resounded with applause for his character and ability. There were, however, some dissenting voices about his choice for the post of Secretary of Defense.

Senator Knowland, who voted against the bill to make him eligible for the job in the Armed Services Committee, said he was against any change in the "historic tradition of civilian control" of the military establishment.

"If there were only one capable of doing the job, it would be a different matter," Knowland said. "But out of 150 million people, I don't think that is a correct analysis of the situation."

Senator Cain, who also voted against the waiver bill in committee, said he had real respect and admiration for General Marshall. He added, however, that he had a deep conviction that military policy ought to be laid down by a civilian "if the country in the long run is going to survive."

Three Republican members of the House Armed Services Committee—Representatives Cole of New York, Shafer of Michigan and Towe of New Jersey—expressed opposition to the bill qualifying General Marshall for the defense job.

Chairman Vinson said, however, that Congress should not be disturbed about precedents. He added:

"In normal times Congress cannot permit military men to have complete control. But this is an emergency. It would take a civilian five or six months, and maybe a year, to grasp the workings of the Defense Department. Marshall can do it at once and speed up our rearmament program."

General Marshall, who resigned from the State Department in 1949 because of his health, looked fit when he arrived yesterday at the headquarters of the American Red Cross. He is president of that organization.

Spotting the photographers who were awaiting him, General Marshall said that this was "where I came in 10 years ago."

"The only reason I can see for taking all these pictures," he said, grinning, "is to prove that I'm not dead yet."

Johnson Defended

Secretary Johnson who resigned Tuesday, declined to pose for photographers yesterday, remarking that he didn't look any different than he did the day before.

Among those who called on him in the course of the day were Attorney General McGrath, W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, and Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the President's Army aide.

Brig. Gen. Julius Klein, past national commander of the Jewish War Veterans and consultant on national defense to the Republican Party, deplored Johnson's ouster, calling it a case of "well-organized character and reputation assassination."

"There is no doubt in my mind," he said, "that history will vindicate Mr. Johnson's position."

The bill sent to Congress by Mr. Truman yesterday provides that General Marshall shall retain his five-star rank and his pay and allowances ,totaling $18,761 a year. In addition, he would receive the $3739-a-year difference between his Army pay and the $22,500 salary of the Secretary of Defense.

The bill also says that:

"In the performance of his duties as Secretary of Defense, General Marshall shall be subject to no supervision, control, restriction or prohibition (military or otherwise) other than would be operative with respect to him if he were not an officer of the Army."

Sears Celebrates 25th Anniversary Here This Week

Sears, Roebuck and Co., which opened its first retail store in the company's Chicago mail order plant in 1925, will celebrate its 25th anniversary in retailing in Washington this week.

Hugh K. Duffield, general manager of the Washington area, said yesterday that the first store was opened purely on an experimental basis. General Robert E. Wood, present chairman of the Sears board, was so enthusiastic about the retail store idea that the company was encouraged to try the experiment, Duffield said.

Duffield described the store's success as almost instantaneous. The company was able to open its first store outside a mail order plant in Evansville, Ind., in October, 1925.

Foreign Ministers Laud Marshall Selection As a Boost to Better European Relations

By The Associated Press

The foreign ministers of two European countries yesterday hailed the appointment of Gen. George C. Marshall as Secretary of Defense.

"Nothing could be more welcome at this stage," Norwegian Foreign Minister Halvard M. Lange said in New York.

Paul Van Zeeland, Belgian Minister of Foreign Affairs, said "I think everyone feels he is the right one in the right place."

Both men arrived in separate planes from their respective countries to attend the North Atlantic Treaty Council meeting this week.

In Paris, French Foreign Office sources expressed belief the appointment of Marshall will bolster the Atlantic treaty alliance.

An informant at the Foreign Office said Marshall was a statesman with a great grasp of European problems and one of those most interested in Europe. He added that the appointment "will result in a unity of action between the State and Defense Departments that can only reinforce the economic and military cooperation between the United States and Western Europe."

All Moscow papers played the news prominently, but there was no editorial comment on this lastest action by President Truman.

In Topeka, Kans., Harry Woodring, former Secretary of War, said he believes the resignation of Johnson is timely and in the best interests of the country."

"I trust Louis Johnson's resignation will relieve Secretary of State Acheson of undercutting politicians" Woodring said.

Johnson served as undersecretary to Woodring in President Roosevelt's Cabinet prior to World War II and they differed sharply over War Department policies.

Woodring Stresses Unity

Woodring said President Truman and Acheson need unity "that they may follow their wise policies in the interest of furthering world peace and avoiding a third world war."

(The United Press reported from the Taegu front that word of Marshall's appointment circulated among United States troops.

(The first reaction—"are you sure it's true?"—was followed by shouts of delight from fighting men of every rank. Officers and enlisted men alike privately had been bitter about Johnson's "economy" hamstringing of the Army.

("This is worth a division," one major said.)

4 Federal Grants To Aid in Fight on Arteriosclerosis

The medical fight against arteriosclerosis, one type of hardening of the arteries, was buttressed yesterday by four Federal grants totaling $230,773.

The funds, granted through the National Heart Institute, Bethesda, Md., are to finance research projects in the disease condition at the University of California, Harvard School of Public Health, the Cleveland Clinic, and the University of Pittsburgh.

Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele, in announcing the grants, described arteriosclerosis as a major disease of the times. It's responsible, he said, for more than 40 percent of the three quarters of a million deaths in the United States each year from cardiovascular diseases."

Pay Boosts for AEC Is Approved by Senate

The Senate passed and sent to the House yesterday a resolution to raise the pay of chairman Gordon Dean of the Atomic Energy Commission, from $17,500 to $20,000 a year.

Pay of commission members would be raised from $15,000 to $18,000 annually, and that of the general manager from $15,000 to a permissable maximum of $20,000.

The resolution also would allow the commission to appoint the general manager.

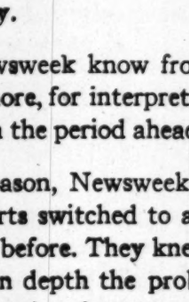
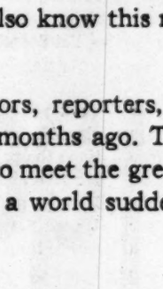
IS RUSSIA TRYING THIS ONE FOR SIZE?





SOMEONE labeled the Korean war World War II½. Perhaps it is. Is it then destined to become World War III? Where will it happen? And what will be the non-communist nations' chances of survival?

These are realities no ignorance can soften, nor wishful thinking cover up.

In effect, Americans may be back to 1941, all of us again with a single, basic and vital job to do, and with a compelling reason to become fully informed and stay that way.

We of Newsweek know from experience the need of the American people for news; even more, for interpretation of the news. We also know this need will grow in intensity in the period ahead.

For this reason, Newsweek's veteran team of editors, reporters, analysts and military experts switched to a war-footing overnight months ago. They had been through it all before. They knew what had to be done to meet the greater challenge of reporting in depth the problems and issues facing a world suddenly and ominously hit by a shooting war.

- The editors have inaugurated a new series of Special Reports entitled "Key to Conflict," showing that seemingly unrelated events are really vital keys to a single evolving world struggle. Already the editors have added up the clues that outline Russia's plans for world conquest : : : measured the weaknesses of the Soviet army and the chances of defending Western Europe : : : assayed the menace of Red China.

  This exclusive feature will continue to piece together all developments that form the pattern of aggression—diplomatic moves, propaganda, armament, military strategy, tactics—wherever they occur.

- Chief Washington Correspondent Lindley has reinforced his Pentagon and State Department staffs.

- International Editor Kern, in Japan at the outbreak of the war to study Far East trouble spots, went to Korea before returning home to resume direction of the foreign staff.

- Tokyo Correspondent Pakenham, veteran Far East specialist, remains at the front, and has been joined by Senior Editor Lavine.

- General Carl Spaatz, Newsweek's brilliant military analyst since his retirement from active duty in 1948 as Chief of Staff, U.S. Army Air Force, is flying to Korea to dispatch his authoritative and exclusive commentaries on war trends and tactics, right from the front.

The news is big and it will grow bigger. It affects you—your family—your future. Therefore, obtaining knowledge of the facts as they are must become a part of everyday living. Newsweek's ability to provide the key to the developing world conflict is drawing more and more thinking Americans to its pages. Read Newsweek today and every week to keep well-informed. Tobey's Victory

It is a gain for the health of our politics that Senator Tobey will be back in the Senate for another 6-year term. To be sure, he has won only the Republican primaries, but there seems to be little danger from the Democratic standard-bearer, who is an unknown in, moreover, a normally Republican State. Senator Tobey had a run for his money, which in his case seems to have been insignificant compared with the funds at the disposal of his Republican opponent, Mr. Wesley Powell. There is to be a recount, but Mr. Powell seems satisfied with the result, saying that his request is merely the due he is paying to his supporters.

All the enemies that Senator Tobey has made while he has been fighting for honest government combined to try to unseat him. They treated the Granite State to free dinners and State-wide parades and demonstrations with bands and live elephants with mahouts attached. It was, for New Hampshire, a spectacular as well as a bitter campaign. But New Hampshire isn't easily dazzled, though the bread and circuses of the opposition, together with the shrill smears emitted by its newspaper organs, certainly made Mr. Powell a formidable contender. Senator Tobey, free of obligations, will, we prophesy, continue to serve the people according to his lights with even more zeal and independence than hitherto.

Marshall As Secretary

General Marshall provides a spur to Americans of experience and ability to pay heed to the tolling bell. He yielded to the call of country in accepting the President's invitation to head the Department of Defense. The President turned to General Marshall as the man who could inspire public confidence in Defense. Marshall has earned that confidence. He is a man of integrity, utterly without ambition, an administrator who speaks as one having authority, and he will be a tower of strength and ripened judgment to the President in the hairtrigger days ahead. Besides, he agrees with the President's foreign policy.

We suggested yesterday that Secretary Marshall had been out of the service long enough to have a civilian mind. This we believe he has gained as a result of his experience as Ambassador and as Secretary of State. A civilian mind is not necessarily linked with civilian clothes, and we could cite many civilians who have never heard a shot fired who out-military the military. And, conversely, there are soldiers who are essentially civilian-minded, notably Gen. Tasker H. Bliss and Admiral Harry E. Yarnell. General Marshall is unlike these admirable men in that he has never shaken off his military approach to organization and administration. He has the chain of command habit, taking his cue from the work of the subordinates he trusts and inspires, instead of deciding upon it by independent study of briefs about alternative courses of action.

However, a civilian he is in the sense that he is a man of peace with a sense of responsibility to his chief and the Nation for the safeguarding of peace. And he is a truly authentic American in his respect for and devotion to our American system of government. He is the sort of man, in short, for whom, specifically, the rule barring a man of his recent military background from the secretaryship should be amended. We have no doubt that this will be done, for Congress knows Marshall of old, having had reason to be grateful to his voluminous mind, which he always opened to the full for the enlightenment of all congressional questioners.

We appreciate that the Nation is marching into a condition midway on the road to a garrison state, and that, in these circumstances, the military is under constant temptation to take advantage of its power. But it is fortunate rather than otherwise that in these circumstances there is a Marshall to fall back upon. Given his recognition of lines of authority, given his jealousy for preserving them, he is the man to keep generals in their places. From now on the MacArthurs, the Andersons, and the Wedemeyers will know there is somebody at the head of the department with inside knowledge and a natural as well as a titular authority. He is a stern disciplinarian with a rather forbidding manner. His place in his own domain is, in truth, the head of the table, and this is needed to clear away the toxic atmosphere in the Defense Department, as well as to see that it doesn't return.

As an administrator the new Secretary will need the aid of a first-rate Undersecretory. He could not have done the work of cutting out fat in the department which Mr. Johnson did. Of course, one man's fat is another's muscle, and this argument is bound to go on and on. However, General Marshall has had an experience second to none in knowing what is muscle and he has the sense of leadership and the will to add to it.

Red China

The Peking government's effort to belabor the Manchurian incident before the Security Council—the incident of American strafing of territory outside the Manchurian frontier of Korea—has been barred. The decision was the right one. There is no need to discuss such a complaint when the United States has already acknowledged that there might have been an incident, and has suggested that representatives from Sweden and India be asked to investigate it. This investigation has likewise been barred—by Soviet veto. What the Chinese wanted was to get a foot inside the Security Council so as to second the desperate effort of Soviet Russia to expunge Korea from the calendar. It was simply casuistic of Mao Tze-tung to say that the mission could not be admitted to Manchuria as long as Red China was excluded from the United Nations.

However, the Peking government will have a better case in asking for the right to appear before the General Assembly when the issue of Formosa gets an airing. It is to be hoped that the United States will support the proposition. This would be no precedent. Outer Mongolia—a hard-and-fast satellite of Moscow—was heard on its application for membership. Albania was invited to speak in connection with the Balkan dispute. The Jewish Agency and the grand Mufti's Higher Arab Committee both were listened to about Palestine. It would be the height of foolishness on the part of the United States not to vote in favor of a hearing for the Chinese Communists on a matter in which they have an obvious concern—on a matter, indeed, over which they are prepared to fight.

Yet Secretary Acheson has tied his hands by deferring to the so-called and miscalled "isolationists." He is in New York after making a promise to the Foreign Affairs Committees of Congress to continue the policy of supporting the Nationalist government as a member of the United Nations. This seems to imply that the United States will set its face against any ad hoc hearing for the Chinese Communists. It is a disheartening decision, if true. A famous statesman used to say that the commonest error of statesmanship is to cling to the carcasses of dead policies. The pro-Nationalist policy, however, is not only dead, it is stinking, and the spectacle of the United States going into the General Assembly with this putrefying albatross around its neck does not correspond with common sense, let alone statesmanship.

We like Communist China as little as the isolationists do. But no great power, especially one that is now sitting on the world's summit, can afford to indulge in prejudices, especially prejudices which offend the judgment of its partners. It must take cognizance of facts if it is to retain world leadership. The sight of Chiang Kai-shek's representative sitting as the representative of a great power in the United Nations is becoming ridiculous. Most countries, and most people, doubtless, in this country seem to be aware of this, but the Administration is restrained by a handful of diehards who refuse to acknowledge realities. What is needed is a diplomacy which would work for the vacating of the Chinese seat in the United Nations till the Chinese Communists give assurance that they will abide by the obligations of the Charter.

In the meantime the Administration would be acting against the country's best interests to let Soviet Russia continue to compound the advantage it has gained with the Peking government as a result of the rearguard action and stubbornness to which we have condemned ourselves on the Chinese question. It is plain to all observers at Lake Success that Russia doesn't really want China in the United Nations. Nothing could have been more pleasing to Moscow than the withdrawal of American consuls in China, and doubtless the step was fomented by Muscovite provocation of the incidents which induced that withdrawal. The justification of this view is the report from Hongkong that none of the 6000 remaining Americans in China has been molested since the withdrawal of our officials. The part of wisdom is to open up lines of communication with Mao Tze-tung, not to treat him as a pariah, forever condemned to outer darkness.

In The Stretch

As of this writing (3:20 p. m., EDT, of September 13) Mr. Stengel's New York Yankees and Mr. Rolfe's Detroit Tigers find themselves just about deadlocked for the leadership of the American League. Just a breath—a hot, panting breath—behind them are Mr. Steve O'Neill's Boston Red Sox. Thus, with the close of the season barely three weeks distant, the uncertainty seems likely to endure until the very end.

The curious thing is that all three contending clubs have at one point or another been counted out by the wiseacres. Early in the season, you remember, the Yankees gave every indication of cracking up. They seemed to have no pitchers capable of lasting more than two or three innings; the usually dependable Mr. Henrich had been put out of action by his repeated infirmities and the great DiMaggio had actually been benched. The Red Sox—whose behavior has always tended to confound the statistics that for some years have rated them the best ball club in either league—seemed in even worse case. The eminent Mr. McCarthy had resigned; the formidable and expensive Mr. Williams had shattered an arm in the All-Star game and was lost to the line-up.

Yet the Red Sox, like the Yankees, appear to thrive upon disaster. Since the departure of Messrs. McCarthy and Williams they have been burning up the league, winning more ball games and losing fewer than any other club. If they continue the pace they have been maintaining since about the middle of July, nothing, it would seem, can prevent them from emerging on top; and we dare say it is no great surprise to anybody that they are now heavily favored in the betting odds.

At about the time the boys were writing off the Red Sox, the Tigers, then leading the league, were putting what seemed a comfortable distance between themselves and their more dangerous rivals. Then they began to falter; and the creaking, spavined, rheumatic Yankees began to show wonderful powers of recuperation and endurance. But at that point attention had become pretty well focused upon a sudden resurgence of Mr. Boudreau's Cleveland Indians, who, unhappily, have since blown themselves out of the race by dropping four in a row to the miserable and despised St. Louis Browns.

Over in the other league Mr. Sawyer's Phillies, a group of brilliant and gilded adolescents, pushed out in front some time ago and have been desperately striving to maintain or to widen the gap that separates them from the Dodgers, the Braves and the Giants. They have been finding the going rather rough of late, however, and their position has hardly been improved by the loss of one of their two prize starting pitchers, Mr. Curt Simmons, who has been called into military service with the Twenty-eighth Division.

Thus the aspect of the National League at this point is also one of some uncertainty. And so, for excitement and tension, the finish of the 1950 baseball season seems not unlikely to match last year's.

Spencer Gordon

Spencer Gordon is often said to have been the best trial lawyer in Washington. Certainly his death at the relatively early age of 63 leaves a gap in the District bar that few men can fill. For Mr. Gordon not only practiced law; he also exemplified the highest standards of the legal profession. While his associates generally admired his skill in the court room, it was his fairness, his integrity and his innate regard for facts that won him an exceptional degree of respect. His words carried weight because judges as well as his clients and fellow members of the bar knew that he spoke with candor, sincerity and the utmost dependability.

On one occasion when Mr. Gordon was trying a case, he was opposed by a smooth-tongued orator who seemed to charm the jury. The odds appeared to be hopelessly against him. He arose and addressed the jury in a friendly, quiet and homely manner, going to the heart of the issue in language that the man in the street could understand. The jury reached a verdict in his favor in half an hour. It was characteristic of him that he reduced everything to its simplest terms and confined his efforts to the main points in controversy. As other great lawyers have done, he gave new emphasis to the power of facts simply and fairly stated.

While Mr. Gordon was a leading authority on the law of libel, he was not an ivory-tower specialist. He went into court with a great variety of cases involving many different fields of law. Whatever the nature of his case, he lived with it day and night in the period before the trial. Always he knew every point of law that was likely to be raised by his opponent and was ready with a reply. His resourcefulness in meeting every issue and his wide knowledge of the law would have made him an ideal trial judge. His stature in the law and his judicial bearing led the District Bar Association to recommend him in 1949 for nomination to the United States Court of Appeals here—for which post he was also eminently qualified.

While he came to know the power that goes with wide experience and deep knowledge, he was not spoiled by his professional success. In 30 years of practice associates never knew him to commit a mean or spiteful act. Nor did he yield to cynicism. "If we are sometimes overwhelmed by the decisions and statutes which are accumulating so rapidly," he told the Bar Association two years ago in eulogizing his fellow lawyers who had passed on, "let us remember that this is only an aspect of the age in which we live, and that truth and justice are eternal and can always be discovered and obtained in the end by integrity and courage." His memory will long enrich the profession and the community of which he was a part.

ROCK LEDGES

Shaggy lands I know that seem to lunge
Against the sky and toss it on the horns
Of heights, and I know tawny lands that plunge
Into the sea, and lands that set their thorns
Against invaders now . . . I love the best
These intimate green hills where trees lean near
And wild blooms climb each pathway to the crest.
Clear springs flow from the rock, and just as clear
Are songs wood thrushes pour from dappled edges
Of wooded slopes. Behind the soft lights here
I see the quiet strength of bare rock ledges . . .
Beauty is not enough, though ages mold it,
Without some partly hidden strength to hold it.

Baseball Park

Want to know why so many baseball fans are fed up with the Washington baseball club? Here's why:

The concession prices are ridiculous—and the concessions are inferior (cold hot dogs, watered cokes, unroasted peanuts).

The score cards are inaccurate.

People are allowed to stand in the aisles even when there are plenty of seats.

The reserved seat sections are unmarked.

The scoreboard is not visible from the right field stands—even by those who have paid for box seats in that section. Nor does the board show National League scores.

The space between seat rows is absurdly small, giving the customer barely room for his knees.

There are leaks in the roof.

Undermining Communism

There is only a slight facial resemblance between the superpatriot seated behind the desk in Herblock's cartoon of September 6 and the superintendent of public schools of the District of Columbia. It may be doubted also that the superintendent's classic illustration of the extent to which he has succumbed to the wave of hysteria now sweeping the country was known to Herblock at the time he conceived his cartoon. But in the blank space on the wall in the cartoon I should like to see added Mr. Corning's abject comment: "I wouldn't run the risk of employing anyone about whom there is any risk at all."

Winning Communists

In keeping with our plea to listen to Christian statesmen, such as Charles A. Wells the Baptist, Frank C. Laubach the Congregationalist, Dr. Mordecai Johnson, Dr. Glenn Clark the Presbyterian, any modern St. Francis of our Catholic Church or any Jeremiah, Amos or Micah among our Jewish brothers—may we quote from a letter written by Mr. Wells:

"The western world will someday learn that we must win people away from communism instead of trying to drive them away with threats of imprisonments, guns, planes or bombs. Communism is based on hatred—class hatred. When we hound men, drive them into jails, or shoot them, bomb their cities, kill their families, the hatred that communism feeds on increases rather than decreases. But the world is strangely blind to this truth that Jesus taught. He won people away from evil by feeding them, healing them, loving them. He finally took the greatest step of all—winning them away from sin by dying for them. Ever since that day, evil has never been able to stand before His presence. He taught men to conquer evil by winning them to that which is good. When will nations and officials who call themselves Christian learn this great but simple truth?"

Tighter Censorship

I have been thinking what an easy time a spy has in this country when most of his work is practically handed to him via radio and newspapers; being furnished with new weapon news, the number of inductions into service, the number of Navy ships being taken out of mothballs, improvements on old planes and data on new planes.

Publicity is given about new weapons and new ammunition and what they will do. One or two secrets are divulged each week. Just a few days ago announcement was made of five extra powerful weapons that would be ready shortly. There also was the announcement of the testing of a new weapon off the Florida coast; the failure of the test, and a statement as to when the next test would be made.

We could profit by a very tight censorship.

"'Wogs' And 'Gooks'"

Your editorial of September 9, "Wogs And Gooks," quotes The Manchester Guardian as saying "Nobody seems to know the origin of the word." I served for 12 years with the United States Army, three of them in Honolulu.

"Gook" is derived from "goo goo" eyes, a derogatory term for Asiatics. The term no doubt isn't helping us "win friends and influence people." This is especially true of the South Koreans.

As for the British "wog" in India, I believe that is short for "pollywog," won by the natives for intensified breeding.

Chiang Kai-shek's Regime

Mark Sullivan, in his column of September 10, makes the usual attacks upon the Truman Administration for the fall of China. Mr. Sullivan attributes the current stage of the gigantic Asiatic social upheaval to the fact that the Truman Administration, over a three-year period

(a) Failed to extend to Chiang the degree of economic and military support which Mr. Sullivan felt necessary and

(b) Through some of its actions caused Chiang to lose face, "and that loss of face was a major cause of his defeat."

With regard to point (a), Mr. Sullivan, with his colossal disregard for historical processes, will probably not live long enough to learn that developments in Korea will be regarded historically as a refutation rather than a vindication of his position on China. The beginning of an understanding of this statement hinges upon the answers to two questions:

1. How much American support would have been necessary to save Chiang's regime?

2. Has the tendering of this degree of support ever been a serious issue in American politics, or, is it even conceivable that the American people would ever politically sanction this measure of support?

Korea should have indicated to Mr. Sullivan that the movement of Asiatic peoples is not such as to be stopped by the diversion of a small fraction of the United States budget for a few years, nor by the shipment of quantities of surplus military materials. Rather than such a cheap staying of the Chinese issue, the American people would be asked to supply dozens of divisions of troops, coupled with the expenditure of tens of billions of dollars over a considerable number of years for additional aid. In light of Korea, can Mr. Sullivan honestly maintain that anything short of this could have done the job? And the ultimate success of even this policy would be very questionable, for it would be contingent upon Chiang conducting a thorough house-cleaning of his government and achieving a base of popular support, and upon the Soviet Union continuing to withhold extensive economic and military aid from the Chinese Communists.

Does Mr. Sullivan feel that this degree of support for Chiang has ever been a serious issue in American politics? If he does, let him ask even Senators McCarthy or Knowland what they think of the political possibilities—even now—of committing even 10 or 20 American divisions to the job of putting Chiang back on the continent.

In light of the colossal corruption and inefficiency in Chiang's government, in light of his police state tactics which rivalled Hitler's or Stalin's in everything but administrative technique, in light of the complete disregard for the minimum economic needs of the people evinced by Chiang's reactionary clique, the statement that Truman's policies contributed significantly to Chiang's "loss of face" with the Chinese people should be beneath even the amateur analyst of Asiatic affairs.

Chiang Kai-shek was swept from power by a social force that had been developing for years, a force which in its developmental stages received a minimum of support from Moscow. Most people with any knowledge of the Far East realized this, and realized further that the amount of aid which would have been politically possible (I do not say desirable) in 1945-49 would have:

(a) Contributed to the eventual economic and military loot of the Communist forces, as did a large part of the aid actually tendered Chiang.

(b) Contributed to the difficulty of our eventual adjustment to a world community containing the Chinese Communists.

Mr. Sullivan's proposals for our conduct of our Chinese relations have, insofar as they have been acted upon in practice, accorded to Stalin a degree of loyalty from the Chinese Communists which the Soviets did not earn through aid or friendship to the Chinese Communist revolution. Mr. Sullivan's views on Red China and the U. N. serve to further this noble process.

In conclusion, we might point out that President Truman's policy of limiting aid to Chiang was not necessarily based upon a doctrinaire disapproval of Chiang's reaction and corruption, which is Mr. Sullivan's presumption when he attacks the "mistakes or worse" of the Truman Administration. Recipients of our aid have been accorded the opportunity of being reactionary and corrupt insofar as these conditions do not completely destroy their effectiveness in achieving the objectives for which they were accorded American aid. Chiang Kai-shek does not meet these fairly liberal terms. In ignoring this fact, and in attempting to poohpooh the ills of the Chiang regime, Mr. Sullivan and other rightist critics of our China policy make a mistake—or worse.

Pattern For Conformity

By Malvina Lindsay

Blink's Metamorphosis

THE MAN at the magazine stand seemed vaguely familiar. When he looked around cautiously before buying a copy of Better Herb Gardens, I recognized my old college friend, Art Blink. "Art!" I exclaimed. "How grand to see you! How's Alice——"

"Wait!" he drew me aside. "Did you see the way that fellow was listening?" he asked, indicating the impassive, elderly salesman. "Let's find a safe place to talk."

I pointed to a drug store. "We could have a coke—"

"I don't like those booths. You never know who's on the other side listening. Let's go across the street to the park."

After some shopping around, we found a bench sufficiently remote from others to satisfy my friend. "Now about the family, Art——"

"My name isn't Art anymore. I've had it legally changed to Xanthophyll—Xan for short."

"But—but," I stammered.

"The way things were shaping up," he went on, "it was the only thing to do. Blink is a fairly common name. So is Art. I was likely any moment to be mistaken for some Communist, fellow traveler, or acquaintance of a fellow traveler named Blink—even Art Blink. See what happened to that professor named Doe. She got taken off an educators' list of lecturers because she was confused with a Communist Doe."

"But it was corrected."

"Who pays any attention to corrections? What everybody believes and remembers—as this election campaign is proving—is the original charge——"

"Or lie," I supplemented.

ART—I MEAN Xan—looked about nervously. "Why did you choose such an outlandish name?" I asked.

"I searched the dictionary for an unusual one. I wanted to play plenty safe. Now Xanthophyll has no recent foreign connections. While it's a scientific term, it has no connection whatever with atomic science."

"Then you've made a clean break with the atom?"

Art—or rather Xan—bristled a bit. "You know I'm not that dumb. I'm thinking about the public, Congress."

"But you don't work for the Government. Aren't you still in the gravy distributing business?"

"Yes, but you never can tell when they'll move in on you."

"'They?' Don't tell me we have an MVD in this country!"

"I mean the people who draw up blacklists, make charges, telephone protests. I've got a family to think of."

"By the way, how's Alice?"

"She's 'Evadne' now."

"Oh, that's probably why I couldn't find either of you in the Columbine alumni list."

"We had our names taken off that. Columbine's been getting some bad publicity lately in the Van Nitter charges."

"You mean the fact he went there?"

"Yes, and a couple of other big public men they're out to get."

"Which 'they'?"

MY FRIEND shrugged his shoulders. "I have to be careful. My daughter Zenobia expects to teach."

"Is that the one who used to be Betty?"

"Yes. Then Heppelwhite—he was Junior—thank heaven, he's studying engineering. That's safe."

"You talk as if Stalin had already taken over here!"

"Sh!" warned Xan. He waited until a passing pedestrian was out of earshot, "Things get carried to Congress. One of those educators on that blacklist lecture list had signed a protest against some loyalty bill."

"But doesn't any citizen have the right——"

Xan shushed me and looked under the park bench. "I have to be careful," he said, "My daughter Dulcinea—the one that was Jane—is crazy to go into radio. They watch you close there."

"Is this the same 'they' or another?"

"Oh the people who publish lists, such as Jean Muir got on."

"What about Alice—I mean Evadne? I never see her at Eata Choo luncheons any more."

"She doesn't belong. Some woman in it got called as a character witness in a congressional hearing and there was a lot of talk. In fact we don't belong to anything. I figure it's the only safe thing—though Evadne thinks it might be smart to join Patriots Ltd."

"What do you think of the international situation, Art—beg pardon—Xan?"

"What! Er—well—as a matter of fact, it all depends on how you look at it."

"Do you think the election will cause a political upset?"

"Well, er—of course it all depends on the outcome."

"I suppose you vote—as yet?"

"Well—er yes, and again no. You see out where we live we figure it's safer not to get mixed up with either side."

Suddenly the warm September breeze felt a little chill. "It's been nice seeing you, Xan," I said. "Remember me to—to Evadne. And safe luck."

Preventive War

Our self-deceptions in this world struggle are tragic. We are not dealing with Russia, another nation of people, but with a cold-blooded ring of murderers of nations and men. There is only one way to treat a rattlesnake: to strike first, at its head. That is common sense.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Something For The Voice To Say

THOUGH THERE seems to be general assent to the President's decision to enlarge the American Army in Europe, the consequences are far reaching and need to be fully and carefully explored.

Lippmann

This is not said in order to oppose the decision. Quite the contrary. The decision is, I believe, momentous and wise. But unless it has informed and convinced popular support, the great good that can come of it may be squandered by the clashing bureaucracies, and only the dangers and disadvantages may remain.

THE STATIONING of a large American army in Europe is a serious step to take. A standing army in a foreign country will soon, unless its discipline is extraordinary, become softened and corrupted as a fighting force. In its relation with the people where it is garrisoned it will create much ill will. The Communists will be working night and day to exploit the inevitable troubles and to inject irritants and poisons into the relations between our armies and the people among whom they must live.

These are not reasons for shrinking from a policy which can in so many respects do so much good. But they are reasons for not treating the project casually and without an earnest and persistent effort to look where we are going.

THE GREATEST significance of this new commitment is, I believe, in its bearing upon the hot issues of high strategy which have been cooking within the Pentagon, the State Department, Congress and among and between them. A great many issues which were theoretical and could therefore be fiercely disputed will be washed away if, in actual fact we place more than a token force of American troops in Europe and accept the responsibilities which would follow if an American is to command the armies of Europe.

The presence of these American troops in the heart of Europe must rule out of consideration any policy which treats Europe as expendable. Therefore it rules out preventive war—the ignoble idea that we could buy security for ourselves by exposing our friends and allies to war and death and destruction.

It rules out all policies and strategical ideas which would seek or accept a showdown with Russia, even if in the course of the struggle western Europe has to be abandoned. These heartless and dangerous doctrines will cease to have any appeal if an American army, an American commander, American honor and prestige are committed to the defense of Europe. A concern for the security of these American forces will carry with it a growing realization of the true position in the world and of how little margin there is in our hard pressed western society for headstrong adventures and reckless promises and soft-headed globalism.

AND SO THE placing of important forces in Europe should, in the present epoch of human confusion, do something to clarify our intentions and our policies. The whole world, including the Russians, has needed to be told in a way that carries conviction that, despite the appearances, despite the speeches and statements of soldiers and politicians to the contrary, our first and paramount interest is the defense of the Atlantic community.

This is the message that the Voice of America should carry to mankind. It should say that we shall defend not only our country but the great community from which we sprang and to which we belong. Its peace and security are our peace and security. Beyond that community we seek only mutual advantage, honest influence, and friendship. We do not seek dominion in Asia. Nor shall we degrade ourselves and disgrace ourselves forever by seeking our own security at the expense of the civilization to which we belong.

U. S. Workers Told to Guard Freedom in Pleas for Unity

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 13 (AP).—Federal employes attending a national convention were told today that they must "meet the challenge of the forces that would do away with freedom in the name of unity and strength."

"Once more we are called upon to demonstrate to the world that there is a unity in freedom and a strength in democracy against which no other force can prevail," said James M. Mitchell, member of the United States Civil Service Commission, in addressing the National Federation of Federal Employes.

Mitchell said the Nation "is faced with what may well be the most significant crisis in its history" and the commission is giving particular attention to the staffing of defense agencies to meet their emergency needs.

"Advance plans have been made for defense-agency recruiting," said Mitchell. "In place of the 'war-service' type of appointment, which necessitated the suspension of almost the entire body of Civil Servce rules and regulations and the substitution of temporary regulations, the commission has authorized 'emergency-indefinite'—which is to say, temporary—appointments in the defense agencies.

"The agencies will be draw upon the commission registers of eligibles for emergency personnel as long as the registers are edequate, but make direct appointment to any position for which no register is available."

Mitchell said retirement coverage will not be extended to war-service employes since previous experience has shown that most of them withdraw their retirement deductions upon leaving the service.

The convention adopted two resolutions today. They urged:

That the leave rights of Federal employes, attacked recently by certain Congressmen as too liberal, be maintained as they are.

That the Federal Government adopt a wage policy designed to attract and hold the best qualified people for Federal jobs.

Rearmament

By Marquis Childs

Statesmen's Choice

NEW YORK.—Between the two World Wars the disarmament conference was the accepted form of public behavior for the statesman. These conferences were full of cant and hypocrisy.

Childs

The frock-coated figures around the green baize table were caricatures of deception and dishonesty. Except for a few pacifists and church people, no one really believed in disarmament. The European nations were still jockeying for power, the losers in the last war determined to be winners in the next.

This meeting of the Big Three Foreign Ministers has at least the quality of novelty. It is frankly a rearmament conference.

Disarmament conferences failed to save the peace in the twenties and the early thirties. Perhaps rearmament also will fail, but at least it is a new and more honest approach. The disarmament conferences of the past usually meant public disarming for some nations, secret arming for Germany, Italy and Japan.

Grave considerations of both time and geography will condition the results of this rearmament conference. It is a long way from the rarefied atmosphere of the Waldorf-Astoria towers, where the three ministers are meeting, to the great, sprawling, gray City of London, to the beaches of Normandy, to the poplar-lined roads of France, and the fields where bent peasant backs are bringing in the root crops.

We here in America must understand what that distance means. At the end of this week Foreign Minister Schuman of France and Foreign Minister Bevin of England will put their signatures to an agreement to build western Europe's defenses as quickly as possible.

THAT AGREEMENT may contain some compromises, particularly on the role to be played by military units formed in West Germany. It may not go as far as Secretary of State Acheson would like with respect to a unified command for the combined forces of the North Atlantic powers.

Nevertheless, when Bevin and Schuman put their signatures to this agreement, it will represent an act of faith and courage. It will be a pledge of their faith that western Europe can be defended. And in the interval while the defenses are being built they will risk annihilation and/or enslavement.

Here in America there is more and more talk about a Russian air attack with atomic bombs against American cities. Such an attack is entirely possible with the planes Russia has in her vast air armada. But consider how much more possible, technically speaking, and therefore how much more likely, is an attack on Paris or London. This is in the minds of the men who must sign for their respective governments.

Given the harsh terms of the present-day world, they have already taken great risks—calculated risks but nonetheless risks. Part of America's retaliatory striking power is situated in strategic air command bases in England. Because of their nearness to possible targets those bases are especially important. Recently Secretary of the Air Force Thomas Finletter and Undersecretary John McCone made a hurried trip to England to try to improve the security of those bases.

WHILE WESTERN defenses are in the planning and building stage, certain ugly and unpleasant things could happen. For example, Moscow could suddenly demand of London that the American B-36 bombers now at these bases be ordered back home. Failure to comply with this demand would mean an immediate atomic attack on the defenseless City of London.

This has a nightmarish sound. But it is nevertheless a serious possibility considered by responsible officials on both sides of the Atlantic. The Russians might even say, as a kind of justification, that the very presence of American bombers in Europe constituted aggression or a threat of aggression.

Fantastic as this seems, it could, tomorrow or three months from now or six months from now, present the government in London with a fearful choice. And that somewhat weary but still tough old trade union battler, Ernie Bevin, knows it very well.

It might, as a matter of fact, be no choice at all since the alternative to what would in effect constitute surrender would be the death of several hundred thousand human beings, to say nothing of the destruction of one of the great centers of history and culture in the Western world. That, it must be remembered, is the nature of the choice these men are making.

'Positive' Asia Action Is Advocated

British Commonwealth nations must first show that they are able and willing to give the maximum of their own aid to South and Southeast Asia before they can call for American help on the problem, a high Commonwealth official declared yesterday.

He is Percy C. Spender, Minister of External Affairs of Australia, and himself the initiator of the British Commonwealth plan for economic aid to the Southeast Asian area.

That plan, he declared in a press conference here, is progressing, but must grow to larger proportions to prevent the new nations in that area from falling before Communism. Military measures, Spender insisted, are not enough. There must be a "positive" approach to raising low standards of living there, he said.

Such a program would have the political effect of making more stable governments and the economic effect of increasing prosperity throughout the rest of the trading world, he said.

Meantime, a proposal based on the same theory, but for direct American aid to Southeast Asia, was broached yesterday in the Senate by Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.).

He advocated economic aid with a first-year appropriation of 500 million dollars. He said "our only hope" for preventing the spread of communism to that area was by giving economic support to the Nationalist leaders of the new nations.

At his news conference yesterday, Spender repeated his appeal for the United States to join Commonwealth and other nations of the area in a Pacific pact of mutual defense. It would be similar to the Atlantic Pact, he explained, containing the Clause Five pledge of mutual assistance against aggression.

The only nations which should be included, he said, are those capable of undertaking "military commitments."

Spender, who saw President Truman yesterday, will leave for New York today to head the Australian delegation to the U. N. General Assembly next week.

Mexico Receives 69 Battle Flags Captured in 1847

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 13 (AP).—The United States formally handed back 69 battle flags to Mexico today with President Truman's assurance of "friendship, understanding, respect and peace."

Lieut. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, chief of a special military escort, handed the first flag to President Miguel Aleman as a token delivery. Mexican army cadets took the remainder from U. S. cadets and midshipmen.

The flags were restored at the spot where six Mexican cadets leaped to death from the walls of Chapultepec castle, 103 years ago today, rather than surrender to U. S. invaders. Captured in the war of 1846-47, the flags had been at West Point Military Academy ever since.

President Aleman, flanked by his military staff, heard President Truman's words from Ambassador Walter Thurston. The Ambassador read a translation of the President's letter.

Big 3 Leaders Shun Showdown On Employing German Troops

no hard-and-fast views on rearming Germany.

What he wanted above all, and what he came to New York to get, was an agreement to set up a genuine army of the West without delay, and with a combined staff and chief of staff to organize it. As proof that the United States was in dead earnest, he brought President Truman's conditional offer of last Saturday to send "substantial" new American forces to western Europe.

How to fit Germany into this picture and when to do it were questions to be discussed in New York, but Acheson regarded them as incidental to the main decisions. Certainly the Americans here were not prepared today to let hesitations over Germany delay or endanger the main agreement they wanted.

Even without a decision to use German troops, the North Atlantic countries could go ahead with the organization of their new defense forces, and with plans to ensure weapons for the additional troops and money to pay for them.

Other Decisions Faced

Moreover, the United States, Britain and France, as the three occupying powers, faced many other decisions on Germany, among them the strengthening of western Germany's internal security against Communist infiltration and trouble-making.

There was still no agreement tonight on how to reinforce the West German police forces, but all three delegations were still confident that an agreement could be reached without too much argument or delay.

Naturally, the news of Gen. George C. Marshall's appointment as Secretary of Defense came as a tonic to the State Department officials here and to the European delegations. To Acheson and his advisers, Marshall is a former chief whom they came to respect and revere during his two years as Secretary of State.

To the Europeans, Marshall is a towering figure, not only because he sponsored the Marshall Plan, but also because his was the wartime decision to give Europe priority over the Far East in American strategy. British and French officials here took the Marshall appointment as an added assurance that the United States would not take its eyes off Europe in its defense planning.

Program Given His Approval

It brought added comfort to the Europeans to learn that Marshall had approved the main outlines of the western European defense program that Acheson brought to New York for this conference.

Before Acheson made his recommendations to President Truman last week, he had a long talk with the general at Leesburg, Va., to get his views on strengthening western Europe. Marshall had only one important objection—namely, to the idea then favored in the State Department of appointing a supreme commander for western Europe.

Marshall counseled against a supreme commander until there was an Army for him to command. The result was the recommendation to the President to appoint a chief of staff, presumably an American, to organize such an army. Later the same man, or another, might be named supreme commander.

So the program of forming a genuine army of the West, of giving it common direction, and of providing it with American troops, has the authoritative imprint of George C. Marshall on it.

The question of unified command came up briefly this afternoon at the second of two long meetings largely devoted to German problems. The ministers were not sure whether to make the military leader of the West a chief of staff for the time being or to call him a supreme commander without delay.

In the end they tossed it to their deputies to work out. But they were fully agreed, as everyone expected they would be, on the principle of a combined Western Army under a single command, and on the need of reshaping the North Atlantic treaty organization to make room for the new combined defense system.

The Ministers also wrestled over the kind of police force that might give western Germany a greater sense of internal security. Bevin was reported to have urged a strong central police force; Acheson and Schuman were willing only to strengthen the state police. As usual at such meetings where there are differences, the Ministers asked their three high commissioners in Germany to work out a compromise and report back before this conference ends.

All three delegations still felt tonight nothing like a deadlock existed, and that the Ministers understood one another thoroughly. The three will have a further talk on German occupation problems Thursday, and hope to reach Far Eastern subjects before they adjourn.

Fay Hits Records Kept by Bondsmen

By Ben Bradlee
Post Reporter

Failure of Washington bondsmen to keep adequate records is hindering law enforcement, United States Attorney George Morris Fay charged yesterday.

Fay urged the House subcommittee investigating District crime to require the bondsmen to keep more complete records about the source of their bonding premiums.

His charge came after small-time gamblers had testified they had no idea who paid their lawyers and bondsmen, and the bondsmen themselves testified they were equally in the dark.

Two members of the subcommittee on Tuesday charged that Washington bondsmen were in "an open conspiracy" between the gamblers and criminal lawyers.

Fay said that bondsmen were governed by rules of the District Court and that there was no statutory obstacle to changing the rules. One draft of proposed changes has already been submitted to Chief Judge Bolitha J Laws of District Court, he said.

Fay appeared as a witness at the last scheduled open hearing of the crime commitee, headed by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.). The meeting was devoted primarily to the annual reports of local law enforcement agencies.

Donald Clemmer, head of the Department of Corrections, urged to the commtitee that the problem of conventional alcoholics be "thoroughly restudied."

The average daily population in the four District institutions jumped from 2738 in fiscal 1949, Clemmer pointed out, to 3244 in the year ending June 30, 1950.

The greatest increase was reported in the District Workhouse, Clemmer said, where the average daily population jumped more than 40 percent from 679 to 952.

Due to Alcoholics

This increase, Clemmer said, was "due primarily to the number of alcoholics admitted. We are breeding more and more the derelict type of alcoholic. It is really a deplorable situation."

The average sentence for alcoholics was seven months, Clemmer told the committee, but some inmates have been to the workhouse more than 200 times and "a great many" 30 or 40 times.

Clemmer told the committee his department urgently needs 20 more men to handle the increase in jail population.

Other witnesses yesterday were William Shafroth, chief division of studies and statistics, Administrative Office of United States Courts, and Lieut. Earl Hartman, head statistician of the Metropolitan Police Department. Shafroth presented a summary of the activities of United States District Court, and Hartman, a summary of Washington crime. Both summaries have previously been made public.

Fay also presented to the subcommittee a copy of the request he has made to the Justice Department for 15 new assistant United States attorneys, and 14 additional clerks and stenographers.

The additional personnel is required, Fay said, to handle the new grand jury system, whereby two grand juries will be in continuous session starting October 1 to handle the increased case load made possible by the addition of new judges, and to handle the record number of appeals from criminal cases.

Davis adjourned the committee at 11:30 a. m. to await the call of the chairman. No open hearings were scheduled, but Davis said some more might be held.

Legislation suggested by the hearings will be drafted and presented to the council on law enforcement, Hyman I. Fischbach said yesterday.

The legislation will probably not be introduced at this session of Congress, Fischbach said.

but Lappin later told reporters he was "almost certain" it was also 1947.

Carlton Hotel records, furnished the committee, show that Shimon registered there from July 23 to August 5, 1947, and the Mayflower has said the policeman had rooms from July 30 to August 11.

This was during the period of the Hughes investigation when the plane maker and his associates were staying at the two hotels.

Fay said he would "thoroughly investigate" Lappin's reported evidence from "all angles."

Shimon has admitted tapping the telephones of Hughes associates at the two local hotels, but contends it was to determine Lappin's motive in shadowing Brewster—not to serve the purposes of the Senate investigating committee.

In two other developments on the farflung wire tapping front:

1. Lappin and five others were summoned before the District grand jury, reportedly to testify in a new investigation of alleged wire tapping involving the Macy subcommittee probe of used car operations in the District.

2. At the Capitol, Acting Chairman Neely (D., W. Va.) unexpectedly postponed further hearings—probably until after the November elections.

Neely emphasized that "our investigation definitely is not closed."

Another session with Henry W. Grunewald, alleged intermediary between the Hughes investigating committee and Shimon, had been scheduled for yesterday.

Quorum Fails to Show

Neely ordered the recess when a quorum of committee members failed to show up.

He explained Chairman Pepper (D., Fla.) is in Ireland attending the Interparliamentary Union meeting and that Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.) was called to Tennessee by the critical illness of his father.

Neely warned Grunewald that the subpena issued for him would remain in force even if the hearings are not resumed until after the November elections.

Grunewald has denied that he served as a link between Shimon and Senator Brewster or the Senate committee investigating Hughes.

The former pugilist, who has admitted he was hired to check Pan American Airways telephones against wire tapping on two different occasions, is scheduled to reappear before the grand jury at 10 a. m. today.

The grand jury dropped the Shimon-Hughes wire tapping case recently when the three-year statute of limitations expired. If the jury is now reopening the case it could only be on perjury testimony in the matter, observers have said.

Other witnesses who appeared before the grand jury yesterday were Walton Woods, Charles F. Meaney, Arthur Perlman and John Reddan, all former staff members of the Macy subcommittee which last year investigated used-car operations.

Long-Range Radar Boosted by Pilots

Airline pilots yesterday told the Airport Use Committee that long-range radar should be employed more in locating airplanes coming in to National Airport.

Almost all witnesses heard by the group, which is studying traffic congestion, safety, and ways to utilize airports more efficiently, said the long-distance surveillance radar would improve air traffic control.

The committee, composed of representatives of Government, industry and the military, sounded out the pilots on problems of congestion and delays at the National Airport.

John Gill, chief pilot for Eastern Airlines, said both radio landing beams (ILS) and radar landing controls (GCA) must be used together for satisfactory landings.

H. L. Roberts of the Air Transport Association told the group that one of the biggest problems at the local airport is the handling of transient aircraft whose pilots are not familiar with procedures used at National Airport.

Others heard yesterday included R. W. Hardesty, Capital Airlines operations manager, Edward Hale, United Airlines' chief pilot; L. R. Dymond, National Airlines chief pilot; Ben Ashmead of the Civil Aeronautics Board, Capts. S. W. Camden of Eastern Airlines and Robert Robson of American Airlines, both representing the Airline Pilots Association.

The final hearing will be held at 9:30 a. m. today at the board room of Capital Airlines in hangar 3 at the airport.

Arlington Police Probers 'Hand-Picked,' Bach Charges

Fred W. Bach, Democratic candidate for the Arlington County Board seat held by Daniel A. Dugan, said yesterday that Dugan "hand-picked" a three-man commission which criticized County Manager A. T. Lundberg and Police Chief Woodyard.

According to Bach, it is "well-known that Board Chairman Dugan has long had aspirations to be either county manager or chief of police," and hoped to "discredit" both men.

Dugan last night called Bach's charges "utterly false," and "ridiculous."

Dugan said he had "no desire either to be county manager or chief of police."

8 Democrats in Prince Georges Delegate Race

The political fight of eight Prince Georges County candidates for six Democratic nominations to the Maryland House of Delegates will be a highlight of the September 18 primaries in that county.

But eight other candidates for the Maryland General Assembly face no primary opposition.

The incumbent Democratic state Senator, L. Harold Sothoron, and John Raymond Fletcher, the Republican who will oppose him November 7, have been nominated without opposition.

Also nominated without contest for the six Republican candidacies to the House of Delegates are William R. Hughes, John F. Lillard, jr., Harry Taylor, jr., Wendell Sigler, jr., Albert R. Hassell and Mrs. Dorothy E. Sousa.

Of eight aspirants to Democratic nomination for the House of Delegates, these six have been indorsed by the State Central Committee: Perry O. Wilkinson, Leroy Pumphrey, George McLeish and T. Raymond Burch, incumbents, and Nicholas Orem, jr. and Ernest N. Cory, jr.

The two independent candidates are Mrs. Georgia Benjamin and Roland L. Nichols.

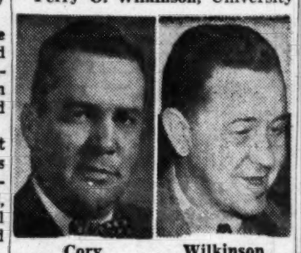
Perry O. Wilkinson, University



Cory Wilkinson

He is vice president of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Prince Georges County and past chairman of the county Rationing Board at Hyattsville. He is a Mason, a Woodman of the World, a member of the Caravan Club and vice president of the Hyattsville Democratic Club. He was elected to the House in 1942. He is married and has a son, 12.

Ernest N. Cory, jr., 36, of Laurel, is an attorney and a native of Prince Georges County, served in World War II as a lieutenant colonel, was special assistant to the Attorney General from 1947 through 1949. He was delegate to the State Democratic Convention four years ago and has been active in Democratic circles.

Nicholas Orem, jr., 39, of College Park, is a Washington lawyer. He is also Hyattsville city attorney. Born on the Eastern Shore, he came to Prince Georges County when his father became

Man Pleads Innocent in Slaying

HARRISONBURG, Va., Sept. 13 (AP).—A 25-year-old landlord will face a preliminary hearing here October 3 on charges of murder and felonious assault in connection with the shooting of two of his tenants.

Maynard Crawford pleaded innocent when he was arraigned on charges of shooting to death 54-year-old Thomas Clarence Reedy and wounding Reedy's 28-year-old son, Clarence (Jack) Reedy.

Bond for Crawford was set at $5000 on the murder charge and at $2500 on the felonious assault charge by Rockingham County Trial Justice Porter R. Graves.

Both men were shot with a 12-gauge shotgun after an altercation at the Reedy and Crawford homes in the Hopkins Gap section Saturday night, according to Deputy Sheriff Bulfin Kiser. The elder Reedy was killed instantly, while his son was taken to a local hospital for treatment.

Engineer in Wreck Tells of Being Late

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 13 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad's "Spirit of St. Louis" was running late, going too fast and ran through a stop signal as it ripped into a stalled troop train, its ashen engineer testified today.

William E. Eller, 68-year-old railroad veteran with 48 years' service, was the key witness at an inquiry into the pre-dawn Ohio tragedy that killed 33 Pennsylvania National Guardsmen Monday.

The engineer, described by his fireman as one of the "most alert and capable men in railroad service," spoke in low monotones and frequently covered his face with his hands.

He said his New York to St. Louis passenger streamliner left Pittsburgh 28 minutes late and lost another minute en route. He said he reduced his speed but "not enough" at the first signal approach block before the stalled train near Coshocton, Ohio.

The engineer testified he did not apply his service brake until he reached the stop and proceed signal near the crash scene. He said he did not apply his emergency until he passed the signal.

Visibility, the engineer said, was restricted because of fog.

Desperate but futile efforts to halt the onrushing "Spirit of St. Louis" were described by the troop train Flagman W. G. Lancaster, 34.

"When I saw 31 (The Spirit), I turned around to look at our train," Lancaster related.

"The conductor and brakeman were trying to repair the broken line. I yelled that 31 was coming but they didn't hear me.

"I continued moving east (behind his own train), using my red and white light as a red signal for the man on 31 to see and acknowledge. There was no acknowledgement.

"I realized from the sound of the motors he was coming too fast."

Lancaster said he lighted a fuse and threw it up against the diesel engineer's window. He said sparks were flying from all wheels on the diesel as the engineer attempted to stop it before crashing into the troop train.

"The first man on 31 I saw (after it stopped) was a brakeman.

"He said 'we evidently hit something up there.'

"I said, 'you sure did, fellow. You hit a troop train up there!'"

Lancaster estimated the "Spirit of St. Louis" passed him at a speed of 50 miles an hour.

Meanwhile, at one minute after midnight tonight, a special train carrying the bodies of the crash victims will leave Coschocton for Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—home of most of the dead.

There will be no group rites. Wilkes-Barre Mayor Luther M. Kniffen requested that there be no mass public demonstration at the station.

Asked for Proof

Gypsy Rose's Accuser Backs Down

CHICAGO, Sept. 13 (AP).—Edward Clamage, the Chicago Legionnaire who publicly questioned Gypsy Rose Lee's political views, today said he does not plan to present any proof of charges against her.

In a statement issued through the American Legion's Illinois department office, Clamage said "my statement to . . . the American Broadcasting Co. was based on information contained in the publication, Red Channels, copyrighted by American Business Consultants, Inc. . . .

"The entire matter could be easily clarified and the answer should come from the publishers of Red Channels."

Clamage told the Illinois Legion convention Monday that Miss Lee was reported to be "a close associate of . . . traitors." He sent a telegram to ABC, which has programmed her for a radio show, advising the network of the pamphlet charges.

Miss Lee denied the charges, and ABC asked Clamage to show proof.

Omaha Playhouse Ignores Charge of Legion Leader

OMAHA, Sept. 13 (U.P.).—Omaha Community Playhouse directors went ahead today with plans to present "Born Yesterday" despite a charge by an American Legion post commander that they were being "naive" about "subversive influences."

Joseph Viardi, commander of Omaha Post No. 1, largest in the Nation, said the author of the play, Garson Kanin, was mentioned in Red Channels, the controversial pamphlet purported to list left-wing writers and artists.

Vinardi said it was "time we stopped bein naive" about "infiltration of that world-wide disease known as communism. I hate to say it but here's an example of being naive: The first Community Playhouse play of the season is 'Born Yesterday'."

"There is no Communist doctrine in the play—nothing subversive," said play director Kendrick Wilson. "It has a patriotic American theme."

Vinardi said he was "not too familiar with the play itself, I haven't had time to read it."

AFL Unit Asks Session On Question of Loyalty

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (U.P.).—The New York Board of the American Federation of Radio Artists, AFL, today called for a conference with representatives of networks, sponsors and advertising agencies to work out "an intelligent solution" to the problem of loyalty among radio and television artists.

The Eastern region national board unanimously adopted a resolution calling for such a conference at a meeting last night. The resolution does not become final, however, until it is voted upon by Chicago and Los Angeles board members. AFRA represents 30,000 radio performers.

The resolution said the dismissal of actress Jean Muir from the NBC television show "The Aldrich Family" because of complaints that she belonged to subversive organizations made it necessary for AFRA to state its official position.

"If we permit American citizens to be condemned without being given the opportunity to defend themselves," the resolution warned, "we are throwing due process of law to the winds and following the Stalinist pattern."

Sanitation Officers Hear Food Talk

OCEAN CITY, Md., Sept. 13 (AP).—Some 400 health and sanitation officers from seven States and the District of Columbia are meeting here for the annual interstate sanitation seminar.

Tells of Train's Speed

HOLDS SPEED TAPE—B. W. Johnson, road foreman for the Pennsylvania Railroad, told a board of inquiry at Pittsburgh yesterday that the tape recording taken from the engine of the crack train, "Spirit of St. Louis," showed that it was going about 50 miles an hour when it hit a stalled troop train Monday near Coshocton, Ohio. Protests Halt Photos of Nude Co-eds

SEATTLE, Sept. 13 (AP).—A scholarly research job at the University of Washington was called off today because parents objected to the photographing of their daughters in the nude.

A university spokesman said it was all the result of a "misunderstanding." But he added that the 300 negatives taken so far had been destroyed and the project had been called off at the school—at least temporarily.

Sponsors said the project had been going on for 15 years at a dozen different schools and referred to it as the "somatotype" (type of body build) project.

But to parents of the girls it was just full length, nude photographs of their daughters—both front and profile views.

University officials said the misunderstanding arose from the fact that because of a heavy registration the girls had not been told, as planned, that the photographing during routine physical examinations was purely voluntary.

The photos were being taken by Miss Barbara Honeyman, executive director of the Constitution Laboratory at the Columbia University Medical School. In New York, the university said similar photographs had been taken earlier at such schools as Chicago, Iowa, Harvard and Columbia.

Dr. William Sheldon, a psychologist and assistant professor of medicine on t he Columbia faculty of medicne, has published a number of medical books embracing findings made from such pictures. The air of the study, the university said, is "to determine if a relationship exists between an individual's behavior and his physique, and to establish norms (patterns) for medical diagnosis and treatment."

Miss Honeyman said that after the photographed students are typed, the faces are blacked out on the negatives. The negatives, she added, are kept under lock and key at the Constitution Laboratory.

Dr. Raymond B. Allen, president of the University of Washingtin, who ordered destruction of the negatives, said:

"It is most unfortunate that the criticism has arisen. This is a scientific study. Pictures have been taken at other schools in connection with the research project."

Prince Georges Board Offered School Site

The Prince Georges County Board of Education yesterday received an offer of a 12-acre tract of land for a school site in the Hollywood-on-the-Hill subdivision in Berwyn.

Director of School Planning Thomas S. Gwynn said the offer, by Burch Properties, Inc., will be acted on at the board's meeting next Tuesday.

Some 1000 homes are under construction or planned in the area, Gwynn said. A new school there would aid in relieving double shifts at the Berwyn Elementary School, he said.

Sunset Boulevard
is tops!

Ordinarily, in advertising a motion picture... every effort is made to display it as dramatically and sensationally as possible...with the most eye-attracting pictures and words...

But "Sunset Boulevard" is no ordinary motion picture. To tell its story in the usual way would surely detract from your fullest enjoyment of it.

The story of "Sunset Boulevard" belongs to young Joe Gillis, movie writer... of Hollywood. It is the story of Joe and two loves. Betty Schaefer, young, fresh and wholesome—the kind he dreamed about back in Dayton. The other, Norma Desmond, a different kind—with a "pay-off" at the end... that makes one of the most sensational climaxes ever filmed.

Only young Joe Gillis knows the whole, wild story of No. 10086 Sunset Boulevard...and only he can tell it... And tell it he does...in a way you will long remember.

One on the Aisle—

A Social Problem In Jungle Terms

By Richard L. Coe

THERE IS SO MUCH that is sensible as well as so much that is good raw movie-making in "No Way Out," that I think the time has come for a perspective on films about the Negro problem.

It seems to me, for instance, that the power of the movies is so great that such pictures can have a tendency to overstate a case. Granted, cases of race riot and KKK action do arise, but, in so large a land as this are they not relatively isolated?

And is the tendency to suggest physical violence between the races in itself both accurate, in the full sense, or even wise?

And isn't it possible that the picturing of a race riot can excite on-the-fence observers to conclude that physical violence between the races is inevitable?

Surely such seeds can grow into self-delusions on the part of those who don't quite trust the civilized approach to this problem. Only three years ago I was told by several eminent persons of this city that should the Negro be permitted inside a theater with white persons, a riot would be inevitable. Yet, for some time now, at movies, concerts and live theater, the two races have mixed, quietly and with dignity.

Watching the more violent scenes of "No Way Out," I couldn't help but think of how this picture would have affected those who talked to me about segregation three years ago. They would have drawn from this picture serious delusions.

Because "No Way Out" is fighting this very crime and is so rightly laying it at the door of ignorance, these comments may strike you as unmerited. Yet, its very use of violence to sell its cerebral story and especially its both passion and theatricalism where both are out of place!

The story concerns a young Negro doctor, just out of his internship, who is called on to treat two thugs in the prison ward of a city hospital. One dies, and there is a technical question as to whether his death was avoidable. The other thug, his brother, blames the death on the doctor and calls on his thug associates final 15 minutes of hairbreadth excitement have the quality of to start a riot against the Negro settlement of the city.

Actor Poitier Scores

The Negro group is warned and beats the thugs to the punch by starting a riot of its own. Through the help of the hospital's understanding head doctor, the dead man's divorced wife, who once loved the living, ignorant brother, saves the Negro doctor from the brother's bullet in a last-minute chase sequence.

Because the acting, lines, direction and photography are realistic and persuasive, the film is an effective one.

There is, for instance, a splendid performance by Sidney Poitier as the Negro doctor. By its very restraint and intelligence, Poitier's playing is a great contribution. Stephen McNally at last gets his chance at a sympathetic role and makes the head doctor an inspiring figure. Richard Widmark plumbs the depth of ignorance in the thug and Linda Darnell is most effective in her first realistic role.

Director Mankiewicz, who co-authored the story, has paced it at an absorbing clip and the film seems to shape up as doing exactly what Producer Zanuck envisioned: to preach a lesson in highly melodramatic movie terms.

The Wordless Distrust

But it is just this point with which I find the most fault. For in his comparatively swift rise in 80-odd years from slavery, the real tragedy of the Negro today is a far more subtle one than expressed in "No Way Out."

While the fundamental point of this picture is that ignorance is the real villain, it states its case in the very jungle terms that are most likely to pander to the baseless fears of the wavering.

And while one may say that our strength lies in admitting our weaknesses, I very much question the propaganda effect of this picture on those who don't know our country and the relative position of things American.

By this I do not mean that everything's rosy, but even through its nihilist title "No Way Out" suggests frenzied despair. So serious a matter merits deeper perspective than the Playhouse film gives it.

"NO WAY OUT." 20th Century-Fox release produced by Darryl F. Zanuck. Screen play by Lesser Samuels and Joseph L. Mankiewicz. Directed by Mankiewicz. At the Playhouse.

Though Tricky Second Act Suffers

Barrie Whimsy Lovingly Played

SIR JAMES M. BARRIE gives us the most enchanting evening of Olney's season with "Dear Brutus."

In lines that range from the surprisingly sophisticated and sharply humorous to the sugariest imaginable, Barrie charmingly writes a whimsy on what would happen if we could make some of our most critical life choices over again. It is a play for those who relish fantasy and decidedly not for those who imagine themselves of the avant garde.

The production is a loving, generally amusing one, especially in such supporting players as Harry Ellerbe, Helen Craig and Harry Sothern, who captures the whimsy right on the wing and tenderly, astutely keeps it alive.

The first act sets the situation, a house party of people who don't know quite why they're there except that they all wish they had a second chance at their most important decisions. The second takes us into a magic wood where they get their lost opportunities. The third shows us that perhaps, after all, they have been right all along and that, whatever their choices, they still would have been the same kind of persons. As the most shrewd of the players quotes, the idea is from Shakespeare: "The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, but in ourselves, that we are underlings."

While the other acts are winningly played, the tricky second suffers badly in its present conception. It almost breaks the play in two.

Brian Aherne Stars

This is the scene to which the young Helen Hayes and William Gillette brought their magic 32 years ago. Its lines, between the artist father and the daughter he never had, drip with honey, maple syrup, pink circus candy, marshmallow and thick, red cherries. To play properly, it should be light as air. Since neither star Brian Aherne nor Carlotta Sherwood evoke this atmosphere, the scene, as played now, should be liberally cut; the idea could be sketched briefly and save considerable fidgeting. Too bad Olney couldn't have lured June Dayton back for the Hayes part; her airy grace would have been so right.

Still, the first and third acts are well played. Several of Barrie's romantic quarrels between a man, his wife and mistress are as sophisticated as any being written today. Harry Ellerbe, the director who returns to acting, is a standout with his expert timng and reading of humor into lines that might well have been missed by a less perceptive player. It's good to see Ellerbe acting again.

Miss Craig Is Welcome

Helen Craig, too long unrecognized as one of our finer actresses, draws the artist's wife with swift, bold strokes, a performance of real assurance. And Harry Sothern, as the long-lived Elizabethean sprite who produces the magic wood, is totally enchanting in his fey part.

John C. Beecher, after his dull part in "Post Road," has a fine time as the old man who realizes he married the right woman, and Mary Haynsworth is nicely sharp as the perplexed flirt. Joan Wetmore, Ralph Sumpter, Wanda Lyon and Dortha Duckworth complete the cast, with Van Williams playing his favorite harp offstage. In so imaginative a piece, Syrjala's settings are more imaginative than ever.

You'll enjoy this reminder of the shy Scot's gift for fantacy.

The amended registration statement covers 110,000 shares of 4 percent preferred stock, $100 par, and 257,064 additional common shares. The latter will be offered to stockholders of record September 21 in the ratio of 1-for-10. The rights will expire October 5.

The new preferred stock and any unsubscribed shares of common stock will be purchased by an underwriting group headed by Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane.

Public offering price of the new preferred and subscription price of the additional common will be determined at a later date. Safeway will apply the proceeds from the financing toward payment of 20 million dollars in term bank loans.

U. S. Industry Plans Record Expenditures

American business now plans a record investment of five billion dollars for new plant and equipment during the current quarter of this year.

Government figures released yesterday show that since the Korean conflict, industry has revised its programs for capital outlays for the last half of this year to a rate above the comparable period of 1949, and closes to the all-time peak of 1948.

Actual expenditures, as distinct from those planned, may be even higher, if past experience is any guide, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Commerce Department declared. The study of capital investment is conducted by those agencies.

Their report, put out each three months, is one of the key indicators of business activity, present and prospective.

The figures show that although business expenditures for new facilities in the first half of 1950 amounted to eight billion dollars—below the total of 9.1 billion dollars during the same period last year—the 1950 total, expected to be 17.9 billions, will be almost equal to 1949 spending.

The 1950 total, as now anticipated, is almost two billion dollars higher now than what was expected by business at the beginning of the year.

The high level of investment could have, of course, inflationary consequences. On the other hand, it manifests a degree of expansion which some Federal economists, particularly the Council of Economic Advisers, insist is essential if military needs are to be met.

Two Big Indiana Banks to Merge

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 13 (AP).—Consolidation of the Indiana National Bank and the Union Trust Co. of this city was approved today by the directors of the two concerns.

The merger involves 375 million dollars, and would be the largest of its kind in the State's history, if finally approved.

The new institution will carry on the name of the Indiana National Bank. It will rank among the first 50 banks in size in the country. Russell L. White, president, said. Indiana National now ranks fifty-eighth nationally.

The capital structure of the consolidated bank will total 25 million dollars. The merger would become effective December 31.

Waltham Watch Starts Recalling Workers

WALTHAM, Mass., Sept. 13 (AP). Approximately 50 employes returned to work today at the Waltham Watch Co., which has been shut down seven months during litigation involving the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Trustees took over the plant from the RFC yesterday on a court order.

The 50 workers called back will start preparing the company's huge inventory—242,000 watches in various stages of completion—for marketing.

Notices calling others back to work were sent out today, but re-employment will be gradual, it was explained.

The century-old plant laid off 2300 workers last February.

American General, Equity Plan Merger

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (AP).—Stockholders of the Equity Corp. and American General Corp. have been called to a special meeting on October 17 to act upon a proposal to merge the two companies. Each is an investment trust.

The merger, according to an announcement by Equity, would result in a simplification of the capital and corporate structure and would decrease management, corporate and tax expenses.

Tank Engines Ordered

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (AP).—The Lycoming - Spencer division of AVCO Manufacturing Corp. has been designated a major source of supply for engines for tanks and combat vehicles under the expanded tank program, it was announced today.

Business Outlook

Truman's Pay-as-We-Go Tax Is Easy to Say, Hard to Get

By J. A. Livingston

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has grown. The speech he made on economic controls, on heading off inflation, would not have been possible a year and a half or two years ago. In 1948 and even as late as 1949, Truman asked Congress for standby price and rationing controls to stop the rise in the cost of living.

Those demands were made just before the 1949 readjustment in business. As such they were not well timed. And they were the demands of a President who wasn't quite hep to the way an economy works. The President and his economic advisers felt that extreme wartime measures would work in peacetime. Yet the cost of setting up controls would have been prohibitive.

Livingston

Obviously, the country is far more prepared for regulation from Washington today than two years ago. Lives are at stake. And it is well to have the nucleus for an all-out war setup—an economic stabilization agency to regulate wages and prices, and a national production authority to direct the flow of steel, copper, aluminum and other scarce materials to munitions plants—in case the Korean war broadens out. But it would hardly pay to build up the immense staff required for regulating prices—setting up local boards all over the country with centralized authority in Washington—if it can be avoided.

And President Truman seems prepared to avoid it. He declared: "There is only one sensible way . . . to pay for our increased defenses. It is the plain, simple, direct way. We should pay for them as we go, out of taxes. . . . If we tax ourselves enough to pay for defense, we will hold down prices. Inflation would hurt us more in the long run than higher taxes now." So far, well said. The President seeks to deal with the cause of inflation, a superabundance of purchasing power, rather than the symptom, rising prices.

BUT WHETHER the President or Congress will really make good on those words is something else again. Senator George (D., Ga.), chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, promised that a seven-billion-dollar second-installment tax bill would follow the present $4,500 million measure. That would bring the total annual tax increase to $11,500 million. Yet President Truman figures that by next June we will be "spending at the rate of at least $30 billion a year" on defense, or $15 billion more than at present. At that pace, spending would be outrunning taxation by $3,500 million a year.

The real test of the pay-as-we-go will come in Congress, when Senators and Representatives take a good hard look at the rates necessary to extract some 55 billion to 60 billion dollars a year, or even more, from taxpayers. That's a 50 percent rise over the current tax take. Corporation rates may have to rise to 50 percent, on top of which an excess profits tax will be necessary. Excise taxes will have to go higher. And so will personal income taxes. (There ain't no votes in that, brother!)

PRESIDENT TRUMAN laid it on the line this way: "All of us—whether we are farmers, or wage earners, or business men—must give up some of the things we would ordinarily expect to have for ourselves or our families." Thereupon the President chided business, as well he might, for unnecessary price increases. But he was ever so careful in dealing with wage earners. For them, he said, "The guiding principle must be: Do not ask for wage increases beyond what is needed to meet the rise in the cost of living."

That is the General Motors wage formula. That's built-in inflation, especially these days when taxes are taken directly out of the weekly pay envelope. If workers are allowed wage adjustments for increased taxation, they won't be "giving up some of the things we would ordinarily expect to have for ourselves or our families." What's more, industrial costs will go up and, presumably, prices will go up, too. The good old inflation spiral will be at work.

Slot Machine Ban Would Affect 400 in Area

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

More than 400 slot machines in Greater Washington may have to go within the next month.

Bills to ban slot machines on all Federal property and to prohibit their use except where they are legal by State action has passed both Houses of Congress. Minor difference in the two bills must be settled in Conference.

A final measure is expected to be sent up for President Truman's signature within a week.

A total of 141 individuals, establishments and government installations in Greater Washington now have these "gaming" devices" on hand, M. Austin Simms, assistant chief of the wages and excise tax division of the Baltimore collector's office, estimates that each of the 141 has between three and five of the machines.

$100 Tax on Devices

They have paid in, either to the Baltimore or Richmond offices of the Internal Revenue Collector, $100 each for occupational taxes on the "gaming devices."

Simms said a "gaming device" is a machine with revolving reels and series of insignia on which there is an element of chance and over which a player has no control.

Classed as "gaming devices" are "one-armed bandits," consoles, claw machines and slot machines on which the player gambles for free plays.

The Federal Government collects $10 a year per machine for pinball machines, which are permitted in Washington. It collects a similar use tax for coin-operated juke boxes.

When the slot-machine bill becomes law, the nearest legal slot-machine will be in Anne Arundel County. Three other Maryland counties also have this form of legalized gambling. They are Charles, St. Mary's and Calvert.

Right now, Greater Washington residents can go to at least 116 places in nearby Maryland and spend money on one-armed bandits and other slot machines for free plays.

Those who are members of the military have a choice of 25 places on military installations to go to risk money—in most cases for a possible payoff.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Sept. 15 (AP).—Lack of sustained demand sent the grain market lower on the Board of Trade today.

At one time losses mounted to a fairly substantial figure, wheat dropping more than 2 cents and soybeans nearly 4 cents. In the closing minutes a run-up developed on the only display of power during the session. That reduced losses a bit.

Wheat closed 1⅛-1¼ lower, corn 1¼ lower to ⅛ higher, oats ⅛-½ lower, rye 1¾ to 2 cents lower, soybeans 2 to 2½ lower and lard was unchanged to 13 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Candidate Attacks Appointment of Gen. Marshall

BALTIMORE, Sept. 13 (AP).—Hugh J. Monaghan, campaigning for the Democratic nomination to the U. S. Senate, today criticized President Truman's appointment of Gen. George C. Marshall to head the Department of Defense.

Monaghan said it endangered General MacArthur's position in the Far East.

"It must be recalled," he declared, "that General Marshall sided with 'Vinegar Joe' Stilwell in his feud with Nationalist China, and as presidential 'expediter,' Mr. Marshall was responsible for the 18 month embargo on Nationalist China that ended in the Chinese Communist conquest of the mainland of China."

Marshall is "an Acheson favorite," Monaghan continued, "and is said to have followed the Acheson-Wallace-Lattimore line on how to handle our Far Eastern foreign policy.

(His references were to Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Henry Wallace, Progressive Party presidential candidate in 1948, and Owen Lattimore, Far Eastern expert at Johns Hopkins University.)

General MacArthur has shown more than once that he is bitterly opposed to the Acheson 'line' in the Far East, and events have more than once proved General MacArthur right . . ."

Lane Reviews Aid To Schools, Roads

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 13 (AP).—Governor Lane tonight brought his campaign for renomination to Harford County with a preview of what his administration has done to better roads, schools and hospitals.

In a broadcast speech he again called on his opponents in the Democratic primary to specify how they would effect vast cuts in money for these services without "sabotaging" them.

The Governor referred only to "the opposition candidate." His leading opponent for the nomination, George P. Mahoney, has charged him with extravagance in fiscal maters.

Lane said the State is contributing nearly sixty million dollars of its revenues to the counties, towns and Baltimore city, helping "the homeowner and farmer against an otherwise inevitable burden of increased taxes at the local level."

County Grants Breather To Group Protesting Tax

Assessments for street improvements totaling $150,000 were stricken from current tax bills of a group of Riverdale Heights property owners yesterday by the Prince Georges County Commissioners.

The move, a temporary one, was taken to allow property owners to pay their bills before the October 1 deadline while the commissioners study an appeal for relief from the assessments which the taxpayers term "exorbitant."

The assessments were levied against residents of parts of eight streets in the community on which improvements and storm drainage were completed in the spring of 1949.

Last May the residents petitioned the commissioners for relief from the tax burden, contending the costs of the project far exceeded estimates given them by county authorities. They were told, they said, that assessments would run in the neighborhood of $15 front foot. Levies actually varied from $12 to $24.

Since individual property assessments run as high as $3000, residents contended they could not pay them and purchase their homes at the same time.

A delegation of 30 persons, represented by Attorney J. Edwin Hutchinson, yesterday asked the commissioners to pay a portion of the assessments from county funds.

A proposal advanced by a committee consisting of County Attorney Jerrold V. Powers, Comptroller Carl Mace and County Engineer Arthur W. Tayman would have the county pay about $52,000 of the costs. This figure represents the difference between an average assessment of $12 a front foot and the cost of the project.

Harry W. McNamee, president of the commisisoners, told the delegation he felt they were entitled to relief, but that the commissioners would make a detailed study of the situation before arriving at a specific amount to be paid by the county.

At yesterday's meeting in Marlboro the commissioners also named Fred W. Tuemmler, planning director for the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, to represent the county in the organization of a committee on defense disposal problems in the Washington area, and approved installation of telephone connections between the Beltsville Volunteer Fire Department and the County Fire Control Center.

Home Rule Efforts Futile, Beall Suggests

Two previous attempts at home rule in the District have failed, Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), said last night in answering a question on why he would not sign the discharge petition for the District Home Rule bill.

Beall was one of the number of candidates for Federal State and county offices who attended a rally sponsored by the Montgomery County League of Women Voters at the Montgomery-Blair high school last night.

A questioner from the audience asked Beall why he would not sign the petition. Beall replied that he was a member of the District Committee and that he did not think it fair to sign a petition "against the members of my committee." He then added his comment about previous home rule efforts.

W. Prescott Allen of Bethesda, and Maj. Gen. Russell P. Hartle, who are opposing each other for the Democratic Congressional nomination also appeared and agreed, as did Beall, that the Hatch act should be amended to permit Federal employes to participate in political activities in communities near Washington.

Herbert Larrabee and Stephen B. Peddicord, candidates for the Democratic nomination for governor, and nearly all of the candidates for Montgomery County offices in both parties gave brief talks.

Joseph Mathias, candidate for county council also spoke.

Black Market For Adoptions Under Fire

A plan to take the "black market" and the "gray market" out of adoption practice by increasing the number of prospective parents is under consideration by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws.

The commission, meeting here at the Statler Hotel, is drafting a model law it hopes to have accepted by all the States, the District of Columbia, and the territories under Federal jurisdiction.

The model law, still in the works, would permit these persons to apply for adoption of a child:

An unmarried person of 21 years; a married person of 21 years who is legally separated from his or her spouse; a husband and wife, either jointly, or with the consent of each other; and the unmarried natural father (regardless of age) of a child born out of wedlock when "such child is the child to be adopted."

In a partial first reading of the proposed model law yesterday, the Commissioners decided they would permit aliens to apply for adoption of children as long as they are residents of a State.

The Uniform Social Welfare Acts Section, which is drafting the model law, explained that the proposal was to take care of men with illegitimate children who "wanted to assume their responsibility" even though they had not reached their majority.

Freedom Crusade Launched At Meeting in Maryland

BALTIMORE, Sept. 13 (AP).—The Crusade for Freedom, a Nation-wide campaign to mobilize the American people for carrying the truth to those behind the Iron Curtain, was launched in Maryland today.

A. A. Berle, jr., former Assistant Secretary of State, told a luncheon of Baltimore civic, business and labor leaders:

"We have been forced to one of those historic decisions which whole peoples occasionally have to make: shall it be freedom for all or tyranny by a few?"

Berle is chairman of the committee on intellectual cooperation for the crusade, which is headed by Gen Lucius D. Clay and sponsored by the National Committee for a Free Europe.

A freedom scroll was circulated at the luncheon. Signatures to the scroll will be solicited throughout the country and then it will be enshrined in the base of a bell tower in Berlin.

The bell, to be known as the Freedom Bell, is currently being shown on a coast-to-coast tour. It is expected to be displayed in Baltimore in early October. The bell is to be installed in its Berlin tower before United Nations Day, October 24.

One of the crusade's biggest projects in "counteracting the big lie with the big truth," Berle said, is Radio Free Europe.

Tigers Lace Nats, 6-1; Yanks Maul Indians, 10-3

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

DETROIT, Sept. 13.—Red Rolfe, who used to be a Yankee himself and has a proper appreciation of that team's passion for pennant gold, was showing some impatience today with spokesmen who were trying to point out that the rest of the schedule seemed to favor the Tigers.

"Nobody," he responded sharply, "is going to beat the Yankees for us. That's a job we'll have to do for ourselves this week when they move in here for three games. If we don't flatten the Yankees in those, and wind up out of it, we'll know why we blew the pennant."

Povich

There was a suggestion that the Tigers also had the Red Sox to lick, and Rolfe agreed that was a good point, too.

"What I said about beating the Yanks also goes for the Red Sox. We can't depend on anybody else to knock them off for us. We can be our own best friend in the tough going."

He wouldn't commit himself on the topic of which club he honestly believed would give his Tigers the most trouble. "That would be kind of silly," he said. "I don't want any more enemies than we already have. As for the Yanks and Red Sox, you can say for me that I hope they both finish second."

THERE WAS another worry to which Rolfe confessed. He doesn't like what has been happening to the Cleveland Indians. "It's nice to have them that far out of it, and know you have only two teams to beat, but it has its disadvantages, too. We did all right with Cleveland when they were still fighting for the pennant, but they could be a different kind of team now."

He was talking about the six remaining games his Tigers have with the Indians. "All the pressure is off them now. They're mad at everybody. In that kind of mood, they may be a better ball club. You run into six games with a team that has a lot of good ball players and is under no strain, and they can make it awful tough.

"Look what the Browns did to the Indians. Cleveland was playing for its life in that series. Any game they lost might knock 'em out of the pennant. So what happened? The Browns went in there, relaxed, and with nothing to lose, met a club that was all tensed up, and knocked 'em off four straight. The team that is out of it can be awful dangerous."

MR. HARRY HEILMANN, the old batting champion who now does the Nation's No. 1 baseball broadcasting job for the Tigers, believes not so secretly that the Yankees are the club the Tigers must lick. "You have to have your luck with you any year you beat out the Yankees," said Heilmann, "and that's tough because they always get most of the breaks."

He hastened to say, however, that the Yankees had something more than luck going for them. "Don't get me wrong," he explained. "When the Yankees get those good breaks that help them win ball games—broken bat singles, or a skull by the opposition, there always seems to be a couple of Yanks on base, and they didn't get there necessarily by lucky hits."

It's wonderfully helpful to be sort of lucky, though, Heilmann added. "You'd have to say Ty Cobb was a great ball player, but he was lucky, too. I saw him steal third base once with the bases full. Then he lit back to second. By the time they stopped throwin the ball around, Detroit had three runs and won the ball game. The next days the papers talked about "Cobb's brainy base running."

BEFORE THE NEXT five days are out, the Tigers will know if they're going to win the pennant. The Yankees are here tomorrow, Friday and Saturday. They will be followed by the Red Sox on Sunday and Monday. The town is so alive to the situation that the five games will probably draw 200,000 fans.

If the Tigers are doing all right by Monday, you'll probably see the phenomenon of a Monday afternoon date, always baseball's worst, drawing 40,000 fans into the park. The Tigers' front office could get well if need be, which doesn't happen to be the case. Backed by Mr. Walter O. Briggs and his body-building millions, the Tigers are outrageously healthy in the fiscal department.

But if the Tigers do wind up with the pennant, it will be despite the prayers of the city's hotel men who are desperately afraid such might happen. They're all booked up solid with conventions in October and requests for World Series reservations that will have to be turned down will undo all the promotional good will they've been paying good money to construct.

Football Dash Pays Star Off With $100 Cash

Mark Smith's desire to get himself in shape for the football season netted him $100 yesterday.

Smith, a quarterback for Sidwell Friends School, was running laps and decided to run a little farther than the distance required by his coach, Al Haringer.

At the end of his jaunt, Mark found a purse and discovered it contained $200.

He returned the purse to its owner, Mrs. Martha Meyrson of 4610 Davidson dr., Bethesda. Mrs. Meyrson had lost the purse Saturday night. She gave him one of the $100 bills.

LaMotta Has To Score KO In 15th to Save Crown

By a Post Reporter

DETROIT, Sept. 13.—Thirteen seconds before his reign as middleweight champion was on the point of running out, Jake LaMotta rescued his title tonight by flattening Laurent Dauthille of Paris, in the fifteenth and last round.

Beaten for most of the 15 rounds by the bounding, hard-pelting Frenchman who had licked him in a non-title bout last year, LaMotta retrieved his slipping crown in a sudden punching fury that caved Dauthulle in and put him on the floor for the full count.

The end was officially recorded as two minutes, 47 second of the fifteenth round. Dauthille, foggy of brain after catching a mess of rights and lefts to the head, made a feeble attempt to get to his feet at the count of ten, but Referee Lou Handler ruled he was too late.

Dauthuille Led

Until LaMotta, a desperation champion in that last round, caught up with Dauthuille, the crowd of 11,424 in Olympia Stadium which paid $71,694 to see the fight, assumed they were sitting in on a change of title.

Referee Handler and both judges had the Frenchman far ahead on points going into the last round. Handler's scorecard showed eight rounds for Dauthuille, six for LaMotta, one even. Judge Joe Lenihan ruled six rounds for Dauthuille, four for LaMotta, four even. Judge Jack Asprey had Dauthuille in front, 7 to 6, with one even.

It was LaMotto's right hand, used chiefly on defense until the late rounds, that started the downfall of Dauthuille. The 26-year-old French lad, looking more like an American dead-end kid than a foreigner, invited disaster when he failed to heed his seconds' demands to box LaMotta in the fifteenth.

Jake Goes Wild

Dauthuille returned to the attack, and a half minute before the round was to end, LaMotta caught him with a hard right to the head. Springing to the kill, LaMotta flailed at the Frenchman with roundhouse lefts and righs, and Dauthuille could only attempt to reel out of the target area.

A dozen times LaMotta pelted the helpless Frenchman before a final right put him on the floor and almost through the ropes near LaMotta's corner. It was the only knockdown of the fight.

Dauthuille had a half-pound edge over LaMotta at the middleweight limit of 160. He was forced to take off ¾ of a pound after the weighing in this morning with a shadow boxing session, after reporting in at 160¾.

LaMotta's string of successes in Detroit, where he has lost only one of 19 fights, apparently was at an end, though, until the 29-year-old champion found his knockout punch again.

Man in Motion

Dauthuille, a leaping, willing, bounding challenger, offered Jake no ready target, and audaciously was beating the champion at his own left-hooking game for most of the fight.

LaMotta relied chiefly on a left jab that was continually searching for cuts under both of Dauthville's eyes in the first 10 rounds, and making a losing battle of it. In the tenth, LaMotta's own left eye was a frantic subject with his own seconds.

LaMotta made his best bid to win the fight in the twelfth before he finally laid Dauthville out in the fifteenth. He won that that twelfth clearly, his best round to that point, after feigning exhaustion, and luring Dauthville into an exchange.

The Frenchman was taking a bad beating on the ropes as LaMotta cut loose with his heavy artillery, and was reduced to rolling and ducking. He didn't know how to hold or clinch. But he fought his way out of it and appeared in no distress when he came out for the thirteenth.

In the thirteenth and fourteenth he piled more points against LaMotta and was seemingly breezing to the title when Jake tagged him and made it.

Bon voyage.

"SPOILER" GETS HIS DUE—In a playful mood, Pitcher Sal Maglie, of the New York Giants, chokes Gus Bell, Pittsburgh outfielder, after Bell hit a cheap home run off him yesterday in the Polo Grounds. The 257 feet homer, hit in the seventh inning, snapped Maglie's record of consecutive scoreless innings at 45, only 1 1/3 innings less than the National League mark held by Carl Hubbell, former Giants' pitching star

Redskins 133 Points Better Than Colts?

Predicted Rain Doesn't Worry Ball —Baugh's a Mudder

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Coach Herman Ball of the Redskins doesn't give a hoot if it rains, as predicted, in Baltimore Sunday when the Redskins open their season against the Colts.

"Why should I?" he asked as the Redskins sloshed their way through a practice session at American University yesterday. "We've got the best mudder in football in Sammy Baugh.

"I remember a certain Sunday in 1947 against the Chicago Cardinals at Griffith Stadium. The field was ankle deep in mud and it rained most of the day. All Baugh did was to pass for six touchdowns as we cut down the Cards, who were favored by three touchdowns, 45-21.

"That wasn't any accidental performance, either. Baugh's a great passer under all conditions. Of course, he isn't as good with a wet ball as he is with a dry ball, but he's so much better than the rest of the passers with a wet ball that we have the advantage when it rains. Two years ago the field was wet and it was raining during our game against the Boston Yanks. Baugh threw four touchdown passes."

Ball emphasized the fact that while Baugh is a great passer in the rain, it didn't mean that the Redskins would rely entirely on his throwing to beat the Colts.

"But it's nice to know that you have a fellow on your team who can do so well when the ball is wet."

IN SHORT — The 133-piece Redskins' band will also be making its league debut in Babe Ruth Stadium Sunday. . . . Indications are there'll be about 32,000, some 6000 more customers than there are completed seats in the stadium, Sunday. Baltimore officials hope to have temporary accommodations completed in a day or so . . . the game is not a sellout yet. Tickets are available at the Redskins' offices . . . the Redskins' coaches are beginning to think that Kelly Miller, the equipment manager, is trying to sabotage their practices. For the second straight day yesterday, the tackling dummy broke as soon as the first lineman hit it, suspending tackling practice. There were no complaints from the linemen.

Washington Has Won 5 in Row While Baltimore Loses 7

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The Colts definitely intend to show up for their scheduled National Football League opener with the Washington Redskins in Baltimore Sunday.

No les an authority than Head Coach Clem Crowe confirmed this yesterday from the Westminster, Md., camp.

"We're going to be there," Crowe said, adding ruefully, "I don't know how much good it will do, though."

133-Point Difference

If you want to have some fun with comparative scores, you'll see that Washington figures to be 133 points better than the Colts.

Here it is in black and white. The Colts were smothered by Los Angeles, 70-21; New York Yanks, 42-17, and San Francisco, 27-14. Washington, in the same order, beat the clubs, 17-14, 31-7, and 31-12.

Crowe, 46-year-old football veteran, has been around too long to try to kid anybody—including himself.

Regarding Sunday's game, he said, "Washington has it on us in too many spots. I'm hoping for a close game, but I'm not looking for it.

"I expect our ball club to be better, but not until later in the season. We're still trying to get organized."

Crowe reported that the Colts' morale is "O. K." despite the losing streak. "Naturally, the boys are down after not having been able to win one. I think they realize, though, they can win some games."

Cheap Homer Ruins Maglie's Bid for Record

By Gayle Talbot

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (AP).—One of the shortest, flukiest, wettest home runs ever hit in any ball park deprived Sal Maglie of a large helping of pitching immortality today.

The Giants righthander was only five putouts from shattering Carl Hubbell's National League record of 46 1/3 consecutive scoreless innings. Then Gus Bell, Pittsburgh outfielder, plunked the sodden pellet against the screen bordering the right field foul line at the Polo Grounds, 275 feet from home plate. It was the only Pirate run, as New York won the game, called on account of rain after seven innings, 3-1. Bell led off the Pirate seventh inning.

Had the ball hit two feet to the right, it would have been a foul ball. A foot higher and it would have struck the wall and been held to a harmless single. But it hit the narrow screen and fell back at the feet of Don Mueller, Giants' rightfielder.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 13 (AP).—Ken Wood's ninth-inning home run put the St. Louis Browns across for a 4-3 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics tonight—their seventh victory in a string.

All this season the Browns have been noted for losing a number of ball games all in a row, but this one tonight gave them their longest winning streak in six years.

Detroit Retains Half-Game Bulge

Berra Raps 22d; Easter Wallops 457-Ft. Homer

CLEVELAND, Sept. 13 (AP).—Yogi Berra led the hitting barrage as the New York Yankees overwhelmed the Cleveland Indians, 10-3, today to keep within a half game of Detroit in the sizzling American League pennant race.

Tomorrow the Yankees open a three-game series in Detroit that could prove decisive.

Berra hit his twenty-second home run of the year into the right field stands in the third, came up with vital singles in the first and sixth, and smashed the ball off Al Rosen's glove in the fourth to score Johnny Hopp.

Luke Easter, hero of last night's thriller when his three-run ninth-inning homer with two out brought victory to Cleveland, 8-7, lashed another terrific blow today. His homer in the sixth—this time with the bases empty—landed just 6 feet short of the 463-foot marker on the bleacher wall in the deepest right center field portion of the huge Municipal Stadium.

Left-hander Ed Lopat, working with only one day of rest after pitching a 4 2/3 innings in Washington, won to make it six over the Indians this year without defeat. He was unable to finish, Eddie Ford replacing him in the eighth when he began to tire.

Griffs Mess Up Rally in 8th, Lose 5th in Row

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

DETROIT, Sept. 15.—Those king makers, the fifth place Nats, who within a week boosted the Yankees to the top of the league and then turned their favors on the Tigers, enabled the Detroit club to stay on top today by blowing a 6-1 ball game.

Stared in the face by a 10-3 Yankee victory at Cleveland, already posted on the scoreboard, the Tigers had the aid and comfort of the Nats in maintaining their half-game bulge in first place. The Washington athletes took their fifth straight licking like lambie-pies, in the final stages of the contest.

They were solidly in the ball game as late as the eighth inning, hacking away at Freddie Hutchinson's 3-1 lead with two on base and nobody out, only to make a horrible mess of that situation.

Little Ted Gray, Detroit southpaw, took over at that point, and the Nats wound up with nothing more. Irv Noren struck out, and Mickey Vernon flied to Vic Wertz in right field. Ed Stewart on first base, developed a sudden mental aberration, decided for himself that the side was retired, and lit out around the bases. He was doubled up for the big third out.

The Nats had one more favor left for the Tigers in the eighth, when they were still trying to sweat out their 3-1 lead. Dente fumbled Gray's routine grounder with two out, and permitted the Tigers to fill the bases. The next thing permitted was a single to Don Kolloway by Joe Haynes, and Irv Noren compounded that blow with a centerfield error, and the Tigers wound up with three more runs.

The most of the gray afternoon whose threat of rain held the crowd down to a 5634 figure, it was a smart pitching duel between Bob Kuzava and Hutchinson, with the Nats getting nothing out of the four hits they packed into the first three innings.

And then Hoot Evers launched a run for the Tigers with a double to center. Eventually Priddy got him home with a single to left, but the Tigers muffed a bigger inning when Priddy got himself picked off first base by Mickey Grasso.

The Tigers made it 3-0 in the fourth with Yost's help. After Groth beat out an infield single, Yost came up with a superb stop of Priddy's smash, only to throw the ball away. Joe Ginsberg and Hutchinson got the two runs home with singles to left.

Having Lunch With a Friend May Cause Reporter to Miss Out on a Great Sports Event

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (NYHT.).—The plan was to go up to the Polo Grounds and see Sal Maglie take a riffle at Carl Hubbell's record of 46 1/3 scoreless innings, the longest hitch of shutout pitching ever accomplished in the National League.

RED SMITH

To an incurable worshiper of Hubbell the idea was — well, incongruous, not to say outrageous and downright obscene. This is no rap at Sal Maglie, a game and able guy whose work for the Giants has been one of the most remarkable developments of the baseball season.

Just the same, you couldn't help thinking: Hubbell and Maglie, of all people. Hubbell the incomparable; and Maglie, a guy whose departure was hardly noticed when he jumped to the Mexican League in 1946, whose return this year was unobserved until Leo Durocher dredged him out of the bullpen in midseason and he started pitching as he'd never pitched in all his 33 years.

Maglie, they said, would work the second game of the double-header against the Pirates, the club Hubbell beat with a no-hitter in 1929.

That would allow time for something more important, even, than the ball game—lunch with Grantland Rice celebrating his recovery from a bout with pneumonia. About 2 o'clock, a waiter in the Chatham reported that it was pouring rain, that Maglie wasn't due to work until the second game, and that there wasn't a chance of playing the first one in this weather. At 3 o'clock it was still raining. No place to go but the office.

"Anything doing?" Roger Kahn was asked. He is the young man in the office who answers such questions.

"Just Maglie," he said, and he held up a strip of ticker tape showing six scoreless innings for the Pirates. Later, the story came in from the Polo Grounds:

The crowd cheers as he walks out through a drizzle to start the first game. He gets the Pirates in order, a fly, a soft grounder, a line drive by Ralph Kiner. Applause.

Gus Bell walks in the second inning and goes to second as Maglie knocks down a smash by Dan O'Connell and throws to first base. Eddie Stanky's fine play holds Ed Stevens to an infield single, and now there are runners on first and third. Johnny Berardino flies out and

Marlboro Postpones Racing Two Days After Sloppy Opener

Bill Bennings

DEAR FOLKS:

Looks as if the flat racing tracks are going to steal a leaf out of the trotting racing book. I mean the listing of "rain days." The harness people, of course, do it through necessity because they cannot operate with a muddy track. I have noted, however, that despite the calling off of a program even for two nights, the fans come out when the sport is resumed in larger numbers. There is no reason flat tracks should operate regardless. If it rains or snows they should be able to hang out the "no race" sign and wait. Marlboro was fortunate in that there were sufficient open dates between the scheduled closing here and the start of Bowie. When the track opened and closed on the same day, one wisecracker said, "Short meeting, wasn't it?" See you on the rail—Saturday.

Miss Prime Defeats Hy In Feature

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

MARLBORO, Md., Sept. 13.—Heavy rains of the past days failed to wash out Marlboro's opening program but did cause a postponement. General Manager L. Ed O'Hara announced this afternoon that because of the torrential downpours the track will be closed tomorrow and Friday. Racing will be resumed on Saturday.

Due to the two postponed cards, racing here will be continued through Tuesday, September 26. The session had been scheduled to end on Saturday, September 23. Bowie opens the first of two fall meetings on September 30.

The Maryland Racing Commission approved the change of dates, O'Hara announced. This is the second time that Marlboro has been forced to close down temporarily. It was recalled that a flash flood set racing back for two days in 1934.

Road Dangerous

Although several roads leading to Marlboro showed high water, the danger of the steady deluge overflowing the small bridge on the lone road leading into the track was the immediate cause of the shutdown. The waters of a small branch seeped over the road yesterday making it slippery and hazardous. Sand and gravel were applied this morning but had little effect as the rain continued.

O'Hara said during the no racing interval the road will be rolled and packed.

The entries drawn for tomorrow's sport will be used on Saturday, Racing Secretary John Turner, jr., announced. All races in the condition book issued to horsemen will be moved back two days.

Despite adverse weather conditions the track did a good business today, the crowd of slightly under 5000 betting $267,000. Last year under fairer skies the opening gathering wagered $310,000.

The running surf, although sloppy, had a hard bottom and there were no mishaps to horses or riders and competition was keen in all events.

Miss Prime Wins

J. N. Barnes' Miss Prime, the current "Queen of Maryland's minor tracks," evened the score with her persistent rival, Mrs. H. Reightler's Hy, by winning the Savage Purse, the day's feature.

Miss Prime, beaten on the wire when last they met at Timonium, held on gamely today to hang a neck defeat on the brown filly. In third position came H. L. Townsley's Simite. A field of seven competed with the scratching of Queen May early in the afternoon.

Simite went to the front in the Savage and set a good pace. However, both Miss Prime and Hy were being rated at the time. When Simite showed signs of weakening, Austin shot Miss Prime into the lead.

Apprentice Doyle Gardner then put Hy to a drive and the filly came to the outside to pass the tiring Simite and challenge the flying Miss Prime. In the final drive Miss Prime held on with rare courage for a well-earned victory.

Veep Autographs Bond Drive Football

Vice President Barkley yesterday autographed a football which the football queen of the University of Pennsylvania will take to Berkeley, Calif., for the California-Santa Clara game September 23. The ball, to be autographed privately by President Truman later, will be auctioned off at a West Coast defense bond rally.

Allentown, Heurich Try Again Tonight

Washington's Heurich Brewers and Allentown, Pa., rained out yesterday and Tuesday, try again tonight in the official opener of the All-American Amateur Baseball Association's tournament at Griffith Stadium.

The last two days of rain not only forced the postponements but made the Ellipse diamonds unplayable.

Tournament officials have decided to play today's games at the ball park. Because they are two days behind in their time schedule, the officials also have decided to play doubleheaders tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday at Griffith Stadium and on the Ellipse.

Other games on tap today are: Maryland State vs. New York Federation, 9:30 a. m.; Pittsburgh vs. Waterbury, Conn., 1 p. m.; Springfield, Mass. vs. Brooklyn, 3:30 p. m. and Baltimore vs. Holyoke, Mass., 6:30 p. m.

The Heurich-Allentown game is slated for 8 o'clock.

N.T.S. Says 7 Schools Want to Get Off Its Schedule

Two Blame Date Conflicts, Contend Games 'Tentative'

By Bill Gilbert

Seven schools have asked to be dropped from the football slate of National Training School for Boys, Coach Joe Bunsa said last night.

The school was ordered this year by the Department of Justice, which supervises the institution, to field one unsegregated team. Previously, two teams were organized, one composed of only white boys, the other of Negroes.

Bunsa said the seven schools were: Mount Vernon High junior varsity, Woodward Prep, Landon, Sherwood, Gaithersburg, Richard Montgomery and Sidwell Friends.

Of the seven opponents that Bunsa said have asked to be excused, two claimed their dates with N. T. S. were only tentative, one said it had too many games and another said it never really scheduled N. T. S.

Gonzaga High is trying to schedule a game with West Catholic High of Philadelphia on the same date it is slated to meet National Training School. In the eevnt it does, school officials said the N. T. S. game would be dropped.

Sidwell Friends and Landon said their dates were only tentative. Friends Coach Al Haringer said that his conflicted with those of N. T. S. and that a suitable date could not be arranged.

Landon Coach Tom Blount said he arranged a tentative date with N. T. S. but was forced to cancel the game when he moved his game with Gilman up.

Harry Lee at Mount Vernon said he had arranged for his "B" or junior varsity team to meet National Training School two times this year but had to withdraw from one of the dates because he had too many games on his slate.

He still has one game with N.T.S., slated for September 28. It must be approved by the Fairfax Board of Education.

Officials of the other four schools were unavailable.

Navy Scraps 'Specialization' for 39 Players

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 13 (AP).—There's no room for specialists on Navy's 1950 football squad. Especially bench warmers.

The Navy will go with 39 players, some contrast to the general spectacle of player benches running the length of the field.

The small squad is the basis of the system Coach Eddie Erdelatz is installing at Navy. As he tried to explain it today, it's a complicated combination of today's platoons and yesterday's all-around players.

"So far we've been trying to find the best 39 players available," he reports. "Every player has been given an equal amount of time on offense and defense.

Hayes, Bunting Big Hopes

N. C. Still Strong Without Justice

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Sept. 12.—North Carolina has lost All-America Charlie Justice and its best two ends, Art Weiner and Kenny Powell, but you needn't shed a tear for Coach Carl Snavely and the Tar Heels.

Billy Hayes

Although it would hardly be accurate to say that Snavely is better off without Justice, Weiner and Powell, it's true, nevertheless, that he has a better balanced team than he had last year before the big three graduated.

His line is bigger and more experienced. From tackle to tackle, it may be the most solid in the Southern Conference with the possible exception of Maryland's.

Backs like Billy Hayes of Arlington, Va., and Dick Bunting of Salem, Va., are no longer depending on Justice to pull them out of a hole. They are doing things on their own.

Bunting, hero of Carolina's brave stand for almost three quarters against Notre Dame, is ticketed for Justice's tailback spot. It is a tough assignment.

Except for that one game, when Justice was out with an injury, Bunting saw only defensive action. Against the Irish, however, he showed wonderful promise, scoring Carolina's only touchdown and punting the Irish back on their heels before the Irish got hot in the third period and won, 42-6.

HE IS SMALLER than Justice at 162 pounds and he isn't as fast as Charlie. Nor can he pass or punt as well—but how many backs can?

Snavely thinks Dick is just fast enough, and just smart enough. He is a Phi Beta Kappa. He'll make his yardage in small chunks rather than in one sweep like Justice.

Bunting is not the best back on the club. That distinction belongs to Fullback Hayes, the Washington-Lee High product. Hayes plodded along steadily for two seasons, but in the shadow of Justice, he received little recognition.

Yet last year, with Justice hobbled by numerous injuries, Hayes was the Tar Heels' biggest ground gainer, outdistancing the great Choo Choo by 70 yards. Billy's passing didn't suffer too much by comparison either.

Snavely likes everything about Hayes except his fascination for hot rod automobiles. Snavely is afraid that one of these days, he'll lose his most prized back behind the wheel of one of those Jitterbug cars.

Billy is up to 175 pounds, and throws perhaps the longest passes of anyone in the conference. He has hit his targets from as far away as 65 yards. And he runs particularly well inside the tackles.

FOR THAT REASON, and because his line is strongest between the tackles, Snavely, a long-time devotee of the standard single wing, is improvising a bit. He is dallying with some of the "A" formation plays used by Steve Owens and the New York Giants.

It's not too radical a change from the single wing. The line is unbalanced, and the right halfback plays on the wing as in the orthodox Snavely system. The difference is that there are two backs four steps behind the center, and the quarterback is deep behind them.

The system enable all four backs to handle the ball instead of only three in the single wing.

The middle of the line, which will bear the brunt of the "A" offensive, is led by Huck Holdash, 200-pound senior from Youngstown, Ohio. Huck is a great blocker, and is one of the best line backers in the South.

DICK WIESS, a 135-pounder from Philadelphia, will be quarterback. He knows how to block for the single-wing plays, and he can carry the mail when the play comes off the "A." Dick scored on long runs against Tennessee and South Carolina last year. Bunting will be at tailback, and Hayes at fullback. Bob Gantt, 170-pound junior from Albemarle, N. C., will be at wingback.

That leaves only the ends unaccounted for in the offensive unit, and that's where two of Carolina's 25 sophs step in. C. C. White, a 6-foot, 2-inch 192-pounder from Victoria, Va., will replace Powell and Tom Higgins, a 6-foot, 2-inch 207-pounder, who is built like Weiner and hails from Weiner's hometown of Newark, Del., will replace Weiner.

North Carolina opens September 23 against North Carolina State before tackling the Irish. Then come Georgia, Wake Forest, William and Mary, Tennessee, Maryland, South Carolina, Duke and Virginia.

Dot Kielty Ousts Peg Kirk, 1 Up

ATLANTA, Sept. 13 (AP).—Favored Dot Kielty, of Long Beach, Calif., advanced to the quarterfinals of the women's National Amateur Golf tournament today, but Polly Riley, of Fort Worth, Tex., another strong contender, was eliminated in the fourth round.

Miss Kielty eliminated Peggy Kirk, of Findlay, Ohio, 4 and 2, while Miss Riley was ousted, one up, by Betsy Rawls, a fellow Texan from Austin.

Darkness ended the best match of the tournament when Fay Crocker, a diplomatic service worker in Uruguay, and Mae Murray, of Rutland, Vt., were all square after 24 holes of their scheduled 18-hole match. It is believed the longest match in the history of the women's amateur.

Before the golden anniversary national began, Dot was considered the one to whip. In the second rank of favorites was Atlanta's Dot Kirby, a Curtis Cupper like Miss Kielty. The tall, thin Atlantan also won today—3-2 over young Betty Jane Thomas of Salisbury, N. C.

Grace Demoss of Corvallis, Ore., whipped Claire Doran, Cleveland, 2-1, and Beverly Hanson, Pasadena, Calif., defeated Eileen Stulb, Augusta, Ga., 4-3. Helen Sigel of Philadelphia won from Marjorie Lindsay, Decatur, Ill., 3-2.

Fifth Round Pairings

ATLANTA, Sept. 13 (AP).—Pairings for the fifth round of the Women's National Amateur Golf tournament:

Dot Kirby vs. Grace Demoss.

Beverly Hanson vs. Philomena Garvey.

Helen Sigel vs. Betsey Rawls.

Dot Kielty vs. winner of Gay Crocker-Mae Murray match.

Coach Blount Says

Landon Has Good Chance To Win Conference Crown

(This is another in a series on area high school football teams.)

Coach Tom Blount is optimistic about his Landon Prep team's chances of winning the Interstate Academic Conference football championship this year despite the fact that his backfield averages only 150 pounds.

Tom Blount

Blount has two boys weighing 150 pounds, one 165 and the fourth 175 in his backfield, but he is willing to sacrifice weight for speed.

About the I. A. C. crown, Blount, a former Navy star, says that "We stand a good chance of taking it. What we had last year plus the experience we have this season makes me believe we do have a chance of taking it."

Quarterback Al Long, one of the 150-pounders, is the important boy in Blount's hopes for a good season. Long is a passer, but his tricky handoffs and pitchouts to the other backs make him a tough man to figure.

Syd Prince, at 175, the heaviest back, will be getting the ball from Long pretty often when the Bethesda team is looking for a yard or two for a first down. When he doesn't keep the ball himself or give it to Prince, Long can let Bill Brawner or Dick Barnett carry. Both are scatbacks and should be able to break loose for long gains.

On the line Blount, a former Navy star, has a 180-pound average. Lettermen tackles are Dan Thompson, 200, and Willard Holbrooke, 780. Guards are Mason Hawfield, 195, and Ellis Weems, 175. At center will be Ted Bledsoe, 170, while Bill Goss and Frank Kimball will hold down the end positions.

Landon, with only 150 boys enrolled in the all boys school, has 35 out for the varsity, 12 of which are returning lettermen.

River Mud Will Restore Golf Course To Old Level

Players' Protest Ignored; Dredges To Pump in Dirt at $100,000 Saving

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Despite protests by golfers, the swamps of the east Potomac Park course will be filled in with dirt dredged from Washington Channel, the Recreation Board was told yesterday.

Four hundred thousand cubic yards of muck will be dumped onto the peninsula of land which has sunk more than three and a half feet since it was first filled in 40 years ago. Golfers in recent years have found the main hazards of the course the unexpected water holes that fill up to knee level after a heavy rain.

Golfers Sign Protest

Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of National Capital Parks, told the board that the dredging operation will begin early in December and take three months.

He said work will go ahead despite protest petitions signed by golfers who say the course will be ruined.

"The park is sinking into the river," Kelly said. "If we don't fill it in we will have to abandon it."

He said that eventually the sea wall will have to be raised.

Kelly explained that only a third of the 27-hole course will be put out of commission at any one time. Work will begin first at the section nearest the picnic area, he said. The muck will be pumped over the ground through a hose.

$100,000 Saving to D. C.

By using dirt dredged from the river by Army Engineers the Park Service will save up to $100,000—the cost of bringing in the fill by truck and repairing the resulting damage to roadways, Kelly said.

The board approved a resolution calling on the National Capital Parks Service to supply attendance figures for the six Interior Department owned pools which were operated for the first full year on a non-segregated basis. Board Vice Chairman James E. Schwab said that white attendance at some of the pools was only 2½ per cent of what it was in 1948.

The Interior Department reported last week that 220,000 persons had used the pools over the summer as compared with 415,000 in 1948, the last full year that a segregated policy was in effect. A breakdown of use by whites and Negroes was not given.

By Bill Klemm—The Washington Post

HIGH WATER—Evie Wolford (left) who won the Canadian National Women's Water Ski Championship, and Dotty Grover, Look Magazine cover girl, find the rains left plenty of water at Hains Point. They will participate there in Bruce Parker's Water Ski Show Friday night as part of the President's Cup Regatta

The District has had nearly five inches of rain in the past four days, and angry waters are swelling the Potomac River and its tributaries.

So far, because winds have backed up the water in its flow to the sea, no real alarm has been felt by Army Engineers.

However, they predicted yesterday that the water will be only about a foot below flood stage Friday morning at high tide.

Yesterday, the water was washing over the seawall along the Potomac River and Hains Point was inundated.

Weather Bureau officials said the river was running about three feet above normal at high tide and is expected to go slightly higher today.

Since September 9, the District has had a registered rainfall of 4.80 inches, compared to only .30 inch for the earlier part of the month. The Weather Bureau said the rain so far has been 3.58 inches above normal and predicted more of it for today.

Today will be cloudy with a chance of scattered showers and a high of around 70 degrees.

Glen Arden Man Killed In Collision

Darius Prather Victim of Head-On Crash With Tanker Filled With Kerosene

Darius E. Prather, jr., 32 of Glen Arden, Md., was killed instantly last night in Prince Georges County when his automobile collided head-on with a truck tanker loaded with 5000 gallons of kerosene.

The accident occurred shortly before 8 p. m. on George Palmer hwy. near White House Heights, Md., not far from Seat Pleasant, Md.

Police did not say whether Prather's car or the truck tanker was in the wrong lane. Prather was headed toward Washington. The truck tanker was traveling from Washington to Annapolis.

According to police, the tanker was driven by Frederick A. Bausum, 22, of Annapolis.

The impact threw Prather from his car, and police believe his head was crushed under the truck. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. John T. Maloney, Prince Georges County medical examiner.

After the impact, the cab of the tanker caught fire but the cargo of kerosene immediately behind was not ignited.

Bausum was charged with manslaughter and reckless driving. He was released in $1200 bond pending an appearance in Hyattsville Police Court September 21.

George Diener, 78, of 1710 C st. ne., was in critical condition at Casualty Hospital after being struck by a car at 10:45 a. m. while he was crossing the street in the middle of the 1700 block of Benning rd. ne. He suffered injuries to his head, neck and legs.

Police listed the driver as Harry Proctor, 54, of Upper Marlboro, Md.

Learly Goodwin, 7, of 225 N st. sw., was struck by an automobile at 4:40 p. m. in the unit block of N st. sw. Police said the child suddenly dashed in front of a car driven by Floyd W. McDaniel, 23, of 2216 12th st. nw.

The child is in serious condition at Gallinger Hospital with head and internal injuries.

Auto Dealer Dies After Bus Crash

James M. Spell, 42, owner of the Bradbury Heights Motor Co., was pronounced dead at Casualty Hospital early yesterday, shortly after his car crashed into the rear of a bus in nearby Maryland.

Mr. Spell

Police said the accident occurred on Marlboro pike, at 48th ave., not far from Spell's home at 4704 Marlboro pike, Hillside, Md.

According to police, the W. M. & A. bus, operated by Charles K. Penrod, 34, of 622 Atlantic st. se., had stopped to discharge passengers. Neither Penrod nor six passengers aboard his bus were hurt. No charges were placed against Penrod.

A native of Roseboro, N. C., Mr. Spell had lived in the Washington area for about 13 years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Almeta Elizabeth Spell; a daughter, Sydney Ann Spell; his father, Thomas F. Spell, sr., of Roseboro, and two brothers, Kirk T. Spell, of 1617 Fairlawn ave. se., and Thomas F. Spell, jr., of Fort Worth, Tex.

Two Are Charged In Traffic Deaths Here

A coroner's jury charged two men with negligent homicide yesterday as a result of separate traffic fatalities last Sunday and on July 26.

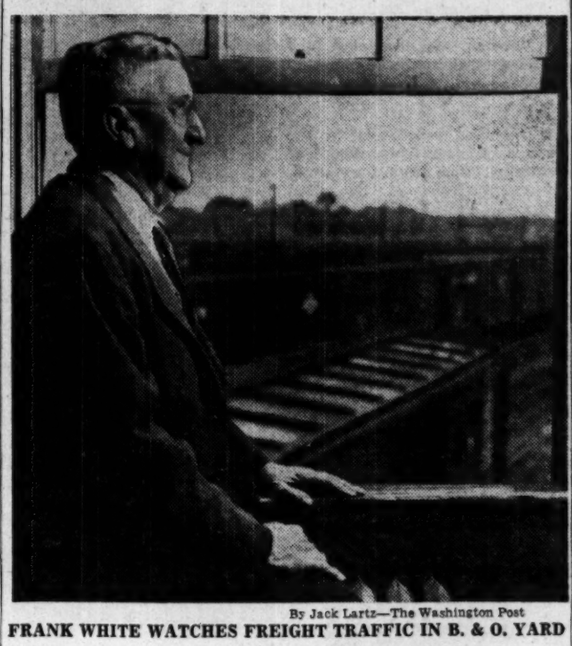
William Michael Solar, 60, a St. Petersburg, Fla., novelty salesman, was released under $1500 bond to appear in Municipal Court Monday in connection with the death of 4-year-old Mary Nell Carter, 1332 12th st. nw. The young girl was killed Sunday when Solar's car collided with a taxi, pushing the cab onto the sidewalk at 12th and P sts. nw., and pinning her against a tree.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, the District coroner, said the testimony showed that Solar failed to stop at a stop-sign.

Cal Brice, 22, 1205 28th st. nw., was released under $1000 bond to appear in Municipal Court Friday, in connection with the death of Richard W. Tillman, jr., 21, 3204 15th st. ne., on July 26.

Brice was driving a truck which collided with another car at 12th and B sts. se., on July 24. Tillman, a passenger in the other car, died two days later. The driver of the other car, William H. Thompson, jr., 19, 1245 Kearney st. ne., has been in Casualty Hospital since the accident, and could not testify until yesterday.

B. & O. Yard Master to Retire After 50 Years of Service



By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

FRANK WHITE WATCHES FREIGHT TRAFFIC IN B. & O. YARD

An era is coming to an end on the Baltimore & Ohio.

When Frank S. White retires on Friday to "let some youngsters step in" it will be the first time in 71 years no one from his family has been connected with the railroad.

White, 65, retiring as general yard master after 50 years continuous service, followed in the footsteps of his father, Samuel Owen White, who retired in 1922 after 43 years as a train baggage man with the B & O.

His brother, Fred, also put in 39 years with the railroad until his death in 1939.

"If you want to go way back," White says, "there's my wife's granfather. He was one of the first track foremen with the B. & O., back in 1846."

White, who started in 1900 as a $10 month messenger, reminisced yesterday over a career that covered two world wars. "It's like leaving my own family," he said, "leaving this job."

He recalled that when he first went to work for the B. & O., the yardmaster's office was at 1st and F sts. ne., and the passenger station was at New Jersey ave. and C st. ne. The yards stretched between North Capital and 1st and F and G sts.

Born in Baltimore, White came to Washington at an early age and attended the old Gales School at 1st and G sts. ne. At that time he served The Washington Post with a regular morning route through the Government Printing Office.

The only time White ever worked outside of Washington was in 1922 and 1923, when the railroad sent him to Philadelphia as assistant trainmaster.

"I didn't like it," said White, "and came back to Washington as soon as I could."

When his retirement becomes final, he intends to sell his home at 2122 4th st. ne., and move to his 30-acre farm near Savage, Md., with his wife, Margaret Helen. Mr. and Mrs. White were married in 1913 and have four children, none of whom work for the railroad.

"I wouldn't let them come near the place," White said, "because once the bug of railroading gets you, you're caught."

Fairfax Asks Gov. Battle To Inspect Its Schools

More State Aid Against 'Critical' Lack of Facilities Sought by Board

Fairfax County supervisors yesterday agreed to invite Virginia's governor, superintendent of public instruction and attorney general to come to Fairfax and see "first-hand" the "critical" shortage of school facilities in the county.

The board extended the invitation at the suggestion of Hubert Gerken, a representative of the county's School Emergency Association. Gerken said more State financial aid might be gained if the officials could "see for themselves" the acute situation confronting county pupils.

Earlier, the supervisors approved a school board proposal to borrow "as much as $100,000" to purchase sites for schools. This amount would be included in a $10,500,000 bond issue for school construction authorized in public referendum last May. The bond funds have been held up because of a suit challenging validity of the referendum.

School Superintendent W. T. Woodson told the supervisors that it might not be necessary to utilize the loan because school officials "hoped" to find aother means of purchasing the school sites.

He said immediate action must be taken to acquire sites because of steadily increasing land values which would greatly increase the cost in the event of serious delay.

The county also is negotiating for purchase of an additional tract on Popkins rd. in Groveton for construction of a new high school, Woodson said. Cost of the new school must come from sources other than the bond issue, he explained.

The board also agreed yesterday to erect a proposed County sewage disposal plant on a site near New Alexandria, object of complaints from many residents of the area. Despite the protests, the board upheld the contention of County Sanitary Engineer James J. Corbalis that the site is the "most suitable" of several which had been considered.

Lee, Council Deadlocked Over Records

The feud of the Montgomery County Council with Col. E. Brooke Lee over records of the now defunct Montgomery County Housing Authority was still unsettled last night.

Lee, who was chairman of the Housing Authority, said in a statement that he had offered to give the county government the records if he would be given receipts stating that the records were borrowed from the Housing Authority pending a court decision on the question of ownership.

Counsel for Lee and county attorneys conferred throughout the day trying to reach a settlement.

The county government had ordered Lee to turn over records of the Housing Authority (which was abolished by the County Council July 1) by 5 p. m. Tuesday or face legal action.

Lee said he received a telephone call from County Manager Irving G. McNayr during which he, Lee, offered to "lend" all the records of the Housing Authority if either McNayr or County Finance Director Alexander K. Hancock would sign a detailed receipt for each book of account or record.

Lee declared McNayr agreed to this proposal but called back shortly to say that county attorneys had advised against the offer because if the county took conditional possession of the records it would lose its right to seek them legally by a writ of replevin.

In his statement, Lee said he learned a newly appointed Citizens Advisory Committee had adopted an "untrue" report about the Housing Authority's administration, for 3½ years, of the Veterans' Housing Projects.

One reason he took personal possession of the records at the end of August, Lee stated, was to photostat the more important records and thus "protect" the record of the Housing Authority.

Driver Jailed On 6 Charges In Wild Chase

Prince Georges County, District and Bladensburg town police early yesterday were led on a dickens of a chase which ended in a clump of bushes at 7th st. and Mount Vernon pl. nw. where an elusive auto crashed into a curb.

Flushed from the bushes was 20-year-old Richard W. Dickens, jr., of 4403 Quarles st. ne., who midway of the chase had made better use of foliage cover to escape temporarily from his captors in Bladensburg.

Taken to the Hyattsville jail, Dickens was held in lieu of a total of $685.20 collateral on six charges. He is scheduled to appear in Police Court there today.

Police versions of the different parts of the chase said it went this way:

Sergt. William A. Baxter, of the Bladensburg force, overtook Dickens' speeding car after a short chase on Defense hwy. in Bladensburg about 1:30 a. m. Under escort to the Hyattsville lockup, Dickens turned sharply on Edmonston rd. and took off.

A short distance away he stopped the car and fled into the bushes with a companion. Baxter removed the license plates from the car and radioed for more police.

Dickens, during the search, doubled back to the car and took off once again, alone. This time, he was picked up on River rd. by County Police Pvt. Joseph Vincent, who fired four shots in a vain attempt to halt him.

As he entered the District, four more police converged on the quarry and he was run to earth.

Dickens was charged by Baxter with reckless driving, unauthorized use of an automobile, exceeding 25 miles an hour and displaying plates not issued to such vehicle. Vincent added counts of exceeding 70 miles an hour and operating without front and rear license plates.

7 Cases Send Area's Polio Total to 277

Seven new cases of poliomyelitis were reported in the Washington area yesterday, bringing the number reported this year to 277.

Montgomery County reported four of the cases for a total of 43. The county health department said they included: A 9-year-old boy of the 5500 block of Lambeth rd., Bethesda, admitted to Children's Hospital last week; a 9-year-old bo, of the 300 block of Pinewood ave., Silver Spring, not hospitalized; a 30-year-old woman of the 3200 block of Fayette rd., Kensington, admitted to Gallinger Hospital September 12; a 15-year-old boy of the 300 block of Baltimore ave., Takoma Park, admitted to Gallinger Hospital yesterday.

One case was reported in the District. The city has had 117 reported cases this year as against 63 at this time last year. The District Health Department said the newest case was a 7-year-old boy of the 3700 block of Northampton st., nw., admitted to Children's Hospital September 11.

The other two cases were reported in Fairfax County, which now has 36, and Prince Georges County, which has 48. The Fairfax case was a 34-year-old man of the 1600 block of Robert la., Falls Church, admitted to Walter Reed Hospital last week. The Prince Georges case was a 3-year-old boy of the 1100 block of Lancaster rd., Takoma Park, admitted to Children's Hospital September 10.

Light Change At 14th and D Speeds Traffic

A change of timing in the controversial new traffic light at 14th and D sts. sw. yesterday eased the rush-hour traffic considerably, but commuting Virginia motorists still wanted the signal light to go.

Wallace Braun, acting District Director of Vehicles and Traffic, had the light timing changed Tuesday after hundreds of enraged commuters swamped his office and the American Automobile Association with complaints that the offending light added up to 30 minutes to their going-to-work time.

"I think we've got it licked," he said yesterday after personally making three auto trips over the new Highway Bridge into 14th st. during the rush hour.

Taking the "worst" lane, the extreme right lane, he said, the trip from the Virginia end of the bridge past the traffic light took 5:15, 5:40 and 4:17 minutes, respectively at 7:40, 7:55 and 8:25 a. m.

This compared with "reliable" reports that the same trip took 12 to 18 minutes on Tuesday, before the timing for northbound 14th st. traffic was extended from 35 to 50 seconds, Braun said.

The embattled Virginians, spearheaded by a group of Department of Agriculture employes, agreed that things went better yesterday, but claimed their trip from home to work was still taking 15 minutes longer than before the light was installed.

The controversial signal has a right-turn arrow for northbound cars and trucks following the U. S. 1 truck route, which turns from 14th st. into D st.

Brown has contended that it's not the light, it's the motorists who get into the right lane and then wait for a through arrow at D st. that cause the tie-up.

This brought snorts from commuters from Alexandria, who said yesterday that a driver coming onto the bridge from the Mount Vernon boulevard is automatically in the right lane, and can't get out of it during the rush hour.

Spokesmen for protesting Department of Agriculture employes said they would continue to circulate petitions to have the light removed.

Boy Jumps for Ball But Hurts His Back

John Raymond Garrison, 10, 4409 5th st. nw., slipped and injured his back yesterday at the Barnard School, 4th and Decatur sts. nw.

A captain of the Patrol Boys, young Garrison was taken to the Washington Sanitarium and Hospital for X-rays. He was reported in undetermined condition there last night. The boy's doctor said he apparently lost his balance while jumping for a ball.

By Mistake

Man Freed In Bond Mixup Here

Because Frank Reid looks like Frederick Reed, Colonel Curtis Reid, superintendent of the District Jail, had a headache yesterday.

But read on:

Frederick Reed, 34, of 1210 9th st. nw., who was sentenced to a 5-to-15-year term for manslaughter in April, 1948, was transferred from Lorton to District Jail Monday by order of District Court. Because of new evidence in his case, Judge Edward M. Curran had granted him a new trial.

It should have been simple: Frederick Reed should have passed through the control center at the jail, been delivered into the custody of a deputy United States marshal, then taken to the clerk's office in the District Court and released in bond pending the new trial.

But by unhappy coincidence, Frederick Reed was placed in the same tier of cells where was lodged one Frank Reid, 25, of Danville, Va., who is awaiting trial on a pocketbook snatching charge.

Monday afternoon, a jail officer went to the cell tier to collect Frederick Reed. By mistake he got Frank Reid. He was taken to the discharge unit and handed Frederick Reed's clothes. Both men are the same size so the clothes were a perfect fit.

Then Frank Reid was taken through the control center where he was asked routine questions and his face was compared with a photograph of Frederick Reed. The two men look enough alike so that no question was raised.

Frank Reid was taken by the deputy marshal to the clerk's office in District Court. The bondsman was also fooled by the similarity. Frank Reid signed the bail bond papers and walked from the courthouse a free man—at least temporarily.

The mistake did not come to light until Tuesday when a restless Frederick Reed inquired of jail officials how much longer it would be before he was taken to District Court.

So the process was repeated. Frederick Reed was taken to court Tuesday and released in $1500 bond pending his new trial.

"Somebody bungled," admitted Donald Clemmer, director of correction for the District, "and we are investigating."

Idle School Property Sale Recommended

The possibility of raising money for District school projects by selling abandoned school properties was suggested last night at a meeting of the North Washington Council of Citizens Associations.

Clifford H. Newell, delegate from the Arkansas Avenue Community Citizens Association, said he knew of valuable properties now in disuse. "It's just a matter of good business" to dispose of these properties and put the money back in the schools, he said. He did not specify properties he said he had in mind.

The council voted to ask the District Commissioners to begin a survey of such properties. Chairman Benjamin Striner appointed Newell, Karl K. Gower of the Brightwood Citizens' Association, and Dr. M. L. Weiss of the Manor Park Citizens' Association, as a committee of three to work with the Commissioners.

After the facts are established, Newell suggested the council might submit a concrete proposal to Congress so that money derived from the project could be used for the schools. Unless Congress authorizes such use, the money would go back to the general fund.

Also upon Newell's proposal, the council placed itself "firmly behind" the District Commissioners' request for funds to establish a civil defense program.

Another Newell resolution, adopted by the group, condemned the proposal to merge Wilson and Miner Teachers' colleges submitted recently by Dr. Walter E. Hager, president of Wilson.

Submitting a progress report on the proposed Coolidge Stadium, Walter M. Bird, of Shepherd Park, told the delegates the stadium would cost $470,000, would seat 10,000, and would include a track, football field and baseball diamond.

Bird urged strong representation of supporters of the stadium plan when the Commissioners hold an open hearing on the fiscal 1952 budget. The Board of Education has requested funds for construction of the stadium in its 1952 budget request, he said.

Public Housing Project Sites To Be Proposed to Planners

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission will receive proposals for District public housing project sites today at the first session of a two-day meeting.

John Nolen, jr., director of planning for NCPPC, said the National Capital Housing Authority's proposed sites for 4000 low-cost dwelling units will be presented by its executive officer John Ihlder. The planning commission must aprove them.

The housing authority has been doing preliminary work on the projects for the past year. Nolen said location of the sites could not be made public because they involve land that must be acquired by the Government.

Nolen said the commission will also:

(1) Hear Chairman A. C. Taylor report on the progress of his Regional Highway Planning Committee in analyzing results of the metropolitan area origin and destination traffic survey made two years ago.

(2) Receive a briefing on the Administration's proposal to disperse key government agencies among areas 20 miles or so from Washington. Though the plan was apparently killed for this session by Congress yesterday, the item will remain on the agenda because of possible future consideration, planning officials said. Nolen said the commission would have very little say over selection of these sites under present law, but would have a say if the commission's reorganization bill becomes law.

(3) Decide whether the Washington Boys' Club tract at Pennsylvania ave and M st., nw., should be acquired for park purposes. An oil company wants to build a gasoline station there.

Nolen said the commission has also asked Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer if he is ready to submit sites under consideration for the proposed new Washington airport.

University Women Back College Merger

The Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women yesterday indorsed a proposal that the white Wilson Teachers College and the Negro Miner Teachers College be merged.

The indorsement was in the form of a letter to the Board of Education from Miss Dorothy R. Swift, president of the local chapter.

Consolidation of the two colleges was proposed by Dr. Walter E. Hager, president of Wilson, in his annual report. The school board, as yet, has not considered the proposal.

The letter called on the board to take steps to bring about the merger. It stated that "one effectively organized and equipped teachers' college, fully staffed with a distinguished faculty, will provide superior education for prospective teachers." The organization further said that one college would save money and "provide the students with the practical training in democracy."

"Such training can never be effected in a segregated school system," the letter stated.

Senate Backs Bill Preserving Georgetown

The Senate yesterday approved and sent to the White House a measure aimed to preserve the architectural flavor of Old Georgetown.

The bill requires that the District Commissioners, on advice of the Fine Arts Commission, must pass on all building permits to construct, reconstruct or remodel the exterior of buildings facing the public streets of Georgetown. An $8000 survey is authorized to obtain the necessary information concerning the historic buildings in the area.

The Senate also passed a House-approved measure which will permit the Interior Department to purchase the Old Stone House at 3051 M st., nw. The historic landmark, built between 1764-67, is reportedly up for sale as a site for commercial uses. The Old Stone House measure was sen to conference to resolve minor amendments between the Senate and House versions.

In another move to preserve the landscape in the Washington area, the Senate approved a bill to authorize the Government to accept gifts of land to add to the present parkway in Maryland between Great Falls and Cumberland. The House approved a similar bill recently. This, too, went to conference.

Faced with an Alexandria District Court order last Friday requiring equal school facilities for white and Negro pupils, the Arlington school board sent Green to Washington-Lee, where a complete auto shop is available.

School officials said he will probably be transported between the two school by his white shop instructor, L. P. Manville, jr., who is being held over in the afternoon to train the youth.

56 Arlington Policemen Back Woodyard Administration

Fifty-six Arlington policemen have gone on record indorsing their chief, Harry L. Woodyard, in the face of criticism made against him Saturday by a special citizens commission.

The policemen, members of the Arlington Police Beneficiary Association, unanimously recorded their support of Woodyard by secret ballot during a meeting Tuesday night in the Arlington County Courtroom.

The three-man commission, appointed by the county board to investigate the police department, Saturday declared that the highly specialized police work was "admittedly beyond Woodyard's comprehension, for he has had no formal or basic police training or education."

Woodyard's training in "the school of hard knocks" and under "hit-or-miss procedures" is a "basic cause" of present police department difficulties, the commission said.

But the association resolution said its members were "proud" to be Arlington policemen and "glad of the opportunity to have served under and to continue . . . to serve under the able leadership of Harry L. Woodyard."

While there is criticism of departmental unity, the resolution added, "no member of the Arlington County Police Department can do his work properly and no citizen . . . can feel properly protected."

The group pledged itself to work for unity "for the protection of the citizens of Arlington County."

Envoys Break Out Black Ties

By Elizabeth Maguire

THE FIRST LARGE OFFICIAL gathering of the fall season was a gala reception held last evening at the Australian Embassy. Percy C. Spender, Australian Minister of External Affairs, and Mrs. Spender, who are at the embassy for a two-day visit, were entertained by the Ambassador and Mrs. Makin at a party from 7 ot 9 o'clock.

MRS. SPENDER

Official and DPL limousines drove up the hill promptly at 7, and in less than quarter of an hour the rooms of the embassy were well filled. Dress was optional but the majority came in black tie.

Mrs. Spender wore a charming frock of rose pink brocade with a cluster of mauve orchids pinned at the neckline. The hostess was in black taffeta with lace inserts, and her flowers were a corsage of red roses.

Guests were received in the library and gathered in the green drawing room for cocktails. Yellow and white flowers brightened all the rooms, and made a welcome contrast to the gray drizzle outside.

A BUFFET SUPPER was served in the dining room, where a long table was spread with a lace cloth and centered with a lighted fountain and more yellow flowers. Food at the Australian Embassy, always prepared on the place, is unsurpassed. Yesterday's buffet included turkey, baked ham, lobster, shrimp, fruit salad, ices and cakes.

Acting Secretary of State and Mrs. James E. Webb were among the first to arrive. Lady Franks, wife of the British Ambassador, and the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Willard Thorp were also early guests.

The Korean Ambassador, Dr. John Chang, was there, as were the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Francis P. Matthews, the Danish Ambassador Henrik de Kauffmann, the South African Ambassador and Mme. Jooste, the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de la Colina, the Uruguyan Ambassador to the OAS, Jose Mora; Chief of Protocol and Mrs. John Farr Simmons, George Elsey and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Shullaw. The Chinese Ambassador Wellington Koo was a guest, but Mme. Koo was unable to attend.

The host, Ambassador Makin, said that next year Australia will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary as a federation and the year after that the King and Queen of England will visit Australia.

Mr. Spender was honored earlier in the day at a luncheon given by Undersecretary of State James Adwin Wedd, at Prospect House.

DINNER AT 8

THE BRAZILIAN AMBASSADOR, Mauricie Nabuco, was host last evening at a dinner given in honor of the Chief of Staff of the Brazilian Navy, Admiral Medeiros. The Admiral's three aides, Comdr. Fernando Carlos de Mattos, Lieut. Comdr. Francisco Maia, jr., and Lieut. Oyama Sonnefeld de Mattos, were among those who attended.

Others were Dr. Hildebrando Accioly, Brazilian Ambassador to OAS; Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, chief of naval operations; Rear Admiral Robert L. Dennison, Naval Aide to the President, and Admiral William D. Leahy.

COL. AND MRS. ROBERT GUGGENHEIM entertained a small group at dinner last evening at Firenze House, their home on Broad Branchrd.

Bazaar to Benefit Fighting Forces

FIRST WITH A BENEFIT for the fighting forces in Korea is Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador. Although she's only just back from a summer in France and the embassy is under repair, she's deep in plans for a huge bazaar to be held at the embassy late in November. Proceeds will go to the Camps and Hospitals Services of the American Red Cross.

During the war years, Washington supported the annual bazaars under the auspices of French Relief for which Mme. Bonnet turned over the embassy. Nobody worked harder than she did to make them a success. She's working just as hard for the forthcoming benefit as a way of showing her gratitude and that of the French people for our help.

While she was in France, Helle Bonnet arranged with the big name coutouriers for blouses, scarfs, and other accessories from their houses. She has wines from Cognac promised, rarely beautiful costume jewelry, perfumes from top firms, all to be donated for the sale.

Christmas shoppers who "just can't think of a thing for Aunt Minnie" will find the very thing at the bazaar, Mme. Bonnet believes.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Heaven Forbid, Says Mother in Effect, That Son Of Hers Should Wear Rented Garments to His Own Church Wedding; His Bride-to-Be Wants Big Show

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For many years my son has been planning to marry Stella, and since she will be married to him, not me, I have voiced none of the criticisms I feel, although he recognizes her faults, just as she knows his. It seems they have achieved a fine understanding of each other and I believe they will be happy together.

The date for the wedding has been set and Stella has decided on a formal church ceremony. And for this ceremony she expects Paul, my son, to wear a rented morning coat, striped trousers, etc. Now it seems to me fundamental that you don't wear rented wedding garments; but Stella thinks the renting is incidental.

In Stella's crowd, this renting of "costumes" for the boys—in order to uphold the social aspirations of the girls and their mothers seems to be accepted. I can't accept it.

I expressed my feelings forcibly a year ago, when I said that regardless of circumstances, no son of mine would ever be married in rented finery. Although they know I can't afford it, and think it ridiculous to buy luxury garments seldom worn, I said I'd buy fancy wedding clothes for him, if that's what Stella insists on having.

In the past Paul has rented a tuxedo from time to time, before he got his own; also he has rented morning coats, etc., for weddings or other social affairs where he assisted. And he and Stella can't see that his wedding is any different. They recognize that marriage is a sacrament, but they can't see my point about dress. Am I an old fogy? Have manners changed so much that it is correct nowadays for a man to be married in rented finery? If so, why not rent the bride's attire also?

If I am wrong, I want to know it. And if I am right—well, I'd hate to miss my eldest son's wedding; but I would be really ashamed to appear if he wears rented clothes. Poor kid, he sees my side of this controversy, but naturally he is willing to let Stella have what she wants for her wedding. I think she should, too. But this seems "putting on;" wearing false feathers, aping high society, to which neither family belongs. What do you think of her stand vervus mine?

V. C.

DEAR V. C.: It is well known that in-laws influence a marriage for better or worse. And more recently, one marriage survey after another is bringing to light the lesser known fact that the man's mother is apt to be more hostile to the newcomer than the wife's mother. In short, the average mom takes more kindly to a son-in-law than a daughter-in-law. Your attack on Stella's wedding plans seems a case in point.

You artlessly say that, except for this, you've voiced none of the critisism you feel about her, which implies that you've felt plenty, but feared to speak out lest you hang yourself with Paul, in view of their good understanding of each other. Without knowing your aim, you've been biding your time to prove her wrong in some really big way, and make yourself the injured party in relation to her, to get Paul's goat for loving her. That's how I interpret your "fundamentalist" stand against Paul's wearing rented finery on his wedding day.

WHAT YOU REALLY oppose is the marriage itself, which unites Paul to a girl who seems to have more influence with him than you have, in contesting her. And the rental angle gives you a talking point for blowing your top. You are determined to be a martyr about the event. Either you'll spend money you can't afford, against their wishes, to buy formal raiment for Paul. Or you will stay away from the ceremony, ostensibly out of shame at the "false" show. Either way, your intent is to give them a hard time and wear a crown of thorns about Stella's "influence" on your "poor kid."

According to my view, freedom of soul is the fundamental value in life. Thus I think it couldn't matter less, at this crucial hour in history, when threat of enslavement overhangs society, whether a bridegroom's cutaway is rented or owned by him.

Where have you been these last 20 years, that you still impute monumental significance to such mercantile hairsplitting? What is important to the new relationship confronting you is kindness of heart, plus a disposition to be a peacemaker, and reconstructive recognition of your own wrong attitudes that were itching for trouble when you wrote this letter.

Grainy Icing Won't Ever Win Blue Ribbons; Avoid It by Adding Corn Syrup

DEAR ANNE:

I made some chocolate cake icing the other day and it sugared. Can you tell me what causes this? Also, is there anything that can be done to remedy the trouble once the icing has gotten grainy?

A. L. T., Alexandria.

Scraping crystals from the side of the pan into candy or icing mixtures can make them "sugar." So can assiduous scraping of bottom or sides of pan when mixture is poured out.

Corn syrup, molasses, or honey in a recipe helps to keep it from sugaring. (So do the cream of tartar, lemon juice and vinegar called for in some mixtures.) If your recipe doesn't already include one of these, add 2 tablespoons of corn syrup next time you make the icing.

Letting the mixture cool to lukewarm before you beat it will help prevent crystals. Cool it quickly by immersing pan in a bowl of cold water.

Once icing or candy has crystallized, it can often be restored to smoothness by adding water and cooking it over.

DEAR ANNE:

We are moving to a house with casement windows, not full length, and I cannot find any ideas on how to curtain them. Can you give me any suggestions?

J. M. B., Arlington, Va.

The information you've given me is a bit sketchy for a specific recommendation, J. M. B. However, here are a few general ideas on casements, which are small-paned windows which swing open rather than sliding up and down.

Shirred glass curtains over the panes give a pretty, soft effect. For these, attach rods at top and bottom. These can be attached either to the sash or to the windows. If attached to sash, they can be drawn back in the middle, at each side, with a tie-back. Or they can be shirred on the rods so that they can be pushed back to the sides or drawn over the windows at will.

Draperies at casement windows do not present too much of a problem unless the casements swing in. If they do, there are short swinging cranes sold that can be attached at either side of the windows. You can then swing the drapery back when you want to open the window. You can use these, with fairly heavy draperies, over shirred glass curtains. Or you can use a semi-transparent drapery with no glass curtains.

DEAR ANNE:

I plan on redecorating our newly purchased 8-room house. At present, the walls are covered with wallpaper. Is there any fast and easy way of removing the wallpaper? Do the walls have to be treated in any way when the plaster is painted for the first time? Do the self-priming paints eliminate the need for any treatment of the bare plaster?

Mrs. S. H., Washington.

There's a paste-dissolving substance that can be brushed on walls to help you get the paper off without too much struggling. After it does its work, you peel the paper off by hand. One downtown paint store that carries it can be telephoned at National 6386.

Ordinarily, plaster walls less than a year old must be treated with a neutralizer before painting so that the free lime in the plaster will not attack the oil in the paint. However, self-priming paints eliminate the need for this treatment, I am told by a local paint specialist. Self-priming paints also make an undercoater to fill in the unnecessary pores. If you're a careful painter, one coat of self-priming paint will suffice, though you may want to put on two. Be sure to have your walls clean before you paint, smoothed by sanding if necessary, and with cracks and holes filled with patching plaster.

How Often, Love!

How often I have wanted you . . . To cherish and to keep! . . . How often I have thought of you . . . And cried myself to sleep! . . . I see the city street and park . . . The country road and lane . . . I walk beside you in the snow . . . And hug you in the rain . . . I hear your laughter in the wind . . . The same as yesterday . . . And then I turn your face to mine . . . And kiss your tears away . . . But now my arms are empty, love . . . And when I dream of you . . . Your lips are hushed forever and . . . The wind is silent too . . . And in the park, along the street . . . The highway or the lane . . . I only feel the melting snow . . . Or touch the tired rain.

Former Diplomat Wins New Laurels as Sculptor

By Marie McNair

MORE THAN A DECADE ago Maj. Julius Wadsworth was forced to interrupt a promising diplomatic career to seek to regain his health. It was that period of enforced inaction that changed the course of his life. He might have been an Ambassador today, instead of a sculptor.

But as a sculptor he has a very satisfying mission to perform on Saturday at his boyhood home in Middletown, Conn. At noon on that day Major Wadsworth will present to the Rockfall Corp. of Middletown a bronze, memorial tablet "dedicated to the DeKoven and Wadsworth families who loved this house, and developed or served communities from here to China."

MAJ. WADSWORTH

Major Wadsworth designed and executed the memorial for his ancestral home for which he has such deep affection. The two bas-relief figures are of John Lewis DeKoven, born in 1748 and founder of the noted DeKoven family in America, clad in wig and frilled stock, and of Clarence Seymour Wadsworth, Major Wadsworth's father, wearing the uniform of his First Company Governor's Foot Guard.

MR. WADSWORTH, at the time of his death less than 10 years ago, willed the DeKoven house and land to the Rockfall Corp., which he had organized in 1935 for charitable purposes. It is now Middletown's Community Center.

Mrs. Clarence Seymour Wadsworth, mother of the sculptor, will unveil the plaque. Major Wadsworth will make a short address to the gathering, which will include members of the Wadsworth family, the local clergy and the staff of the First Company Governor's Foot Guard of which Major Wadsworth served as major-commandant back in 1923.

MAJOR WADSWORTH'S GIFT for sculpture lay dormant until four years ago. He has his own studio now but works sometimes at Felix de Weldon's atelier under this noted sculptor's counsel. The artist found Mahatma Ghandi one of his most interesting subjects. He has also done sculptured portraits of George Washington, Simon Bolivar and former Senator Hiram Bingham.

When he resigned from the diplomatic service in 1939, Major Wadsworth went to the Virgin Islands, bought Denis Bay plantation and gave careful attention to its development. Meanwhile, he had married the talented Cleome Carroll, a pupil of stage designer Norman Bel Geddes.

During the war years he was at the Pentagon with Military Intelligence, starting as a lieutenant in AUS, winding up with the rank of major. He's an active Reserve Officer with the 300th Military Government; a director of the Military Government Association and president of the Washington Chapter, and executive vice chairman of the Greater Washington Citizens Committee for Government Reorganization.

Properly Fitted Shoes Are Most Important for Happy Feet

(Twelfth day of Margaret's two weeks' beauty program.)

By Ann Lawrence

A TIP to the college miss: Look directly below you . . . at your feet.

Ever give a thought to pampering them a bit?

Or are they just two pedal extremities to carry you, uncomplainingly, over the campus, up and down the stairs, hiking through a strenuous weekend, dancing the midnight hours away, no matter how you treat them?

The first step to happy feet is, of course, properly fitted shoes. If you've been kicking around in sandals and scuffs all summer, your toes may feel cramped the first time you squeeze them into a real shoe.

Whatever you do, don't force your foot! If the shoe feels tight in the salesroom, it's going to rub just as much when you get it home, with ugly corns, callouses and dangerous blisters likely to result. If the shoe is too loose, insist upon trying another size, in length or width. Too loose shoes can also rub and cause blisters.

The day of "breaking in" a pair of shoes is over. Leathers are soft and pliable and there's no need ever for a shoe to feel hard and new on your foot. You should be able to walk out . . . and walk a mile . . . in any new pair of shoes.

MARGARET decided that she would need a minimum of three pairs of shoes to start her college wardrobe. And she wanted footgear to flatter her rather long and narrow foot. Pictured on the page are three pairs she selected as the basis of her wardrobe.

The first shoe is a brown alligator pump, with a low, but shaped heel. Its V-cut throat is flattering to the not-so-small foot, as is the gracefully cut side of the shoe. Margaret will wear it on campus with her sweaters and skirts, in town with her tailored suits. The second pair happily combines suede with polished calf in a low-heel pump. Squared off toe diminishes foot length in this versatile spectator sport shoe.

The third pair, reserved for dress-up occasions, is a black suede opera pump. Again, the V-throat line was chosen for flattery. The open work pattern of criss-cross at the instep also serves to foreshorten the foot.

AS a further treat to her feet, Margaret will massage them with her hand lotion every time she steps from the shower. In this way, she'll keep the skin soft and smooth and will help to prevent callouses from forming. Should she get a callous, she'll use her emery board, or a piece of pumice stone, after her bath to rub away the hardened tough skin. She will never, ever attempt to cut a corn herself. That's business for a chiropodist.

And in cutting her toenails, she'll cut them straight across, being careful not to dig down deep into the corners. An ingrown nail can result from incorrectly cut corners.

Planning Fall Wardrobe Involves More Than Talk

BIG NEWS FOR FALL—THE COSTUME SUIT!—Here a box jacket of imported checked tweed sets off the sheathness of a one-piece navy wool. Alone or together they answer many a wardrobe need. By Anna Miller. Melusine cloche by Mr. John. Both at Erlebacher's

By Evelyn Hayes

TEA-ROOMS AND BRIDGE tables always buzz this time of year with feminine chatter of fall clothes and wardrobe plans. The newer the look, the louder the chatter—and this year when the sheath silhouette and its wearable variations look appealingly new, the chatter is loud indeed.

Actually, planning a wardrobe should be more calculated than conversational. Of course, "planning a wardrobe" is really a figure of speech because practically no one has to plan a whole new wardrobe. Despite comic allusions to the contrary, no woman since Eve has ever been reduced to a fig leaf! What most of us do, no matter what our income, is to expand a current wardrobe in terms of the new fashions and our regular pattern of life. Obviously, what would be a good choice for a career girl in New York would be useless to a new mother in Arlington.

Think of the clothes you buy as an integral part of a major investment (your wardrobe is that!) and you won't buy in haste. You'll think hard about investing wisely. First, note what's new by scanning the fashion pages in newspapers and magazines and the advertisements for Washington fashions.

WITH THIS BACKGROUND you can then evaluate what you already own. Be coldly critical about your clothes as you look them over. Eliminate from your planning anything that can't be repaired or rejuvenated. Better give it away than let it hang in your closet as fodder for moths.

Having eliminated what won't serve any purpose in your wardrobe, you can chart what will. Yes, make a neat chart listing everything you think you'll use—coat, suits, dresses and the accessories to go with each. If these are charted in three categories under Daytime, Informal PM and Formal PM—you'll be able to see at a glance just where the gaps are.

Once you've decided the type of clothes you need—i. e. cocktail suit, daytime dress, etc.—then decide on color. A good rule here: Build your wardrobe around one dominant color.

The dominant color doesn't have to be black. It can be navy blue, brown or even dark gray. It must be a neutral that you won't tire of, and one that will be pleasantly compatible with other colors. Take brown, for example—especially good this year. If you own a brown coat that's wearable—needing just to be shortened, perhaps—and your charting reveals you need a daytime dress, you might think in terms of one of the new dark grays which look so smart with brown. For spice you might try one of this winter's important tangerine tones. As with any spice, of course, a little goes a long way.

GENERAL RULE TWO in planning is to buy the best quality your can afford in coats and suits. The simple good suit or coat is what you'll want to carry over from year to year with timeless chic, so be sure the lines are simple, the cloth is good and the workmanship will stand up. You'll be more than repaid by good fit, long wear and general satisfaction.

Of course, you don't have to bother with planning at all! Go ahead and fall for that display of a blue dress that you "don't really need." Rush out at the last minute to buy something for that big party—it won't be your best color but you can't be too particular when you're in a hurry. By that method, you'll end up with lots of clothes, but no wardrobe and "nothing to wear."

SOFT DRESSMAKER SUIT by Anthony Blotta—Of sheer imported wool, beautifully detailed, its slim lines are new this year and will be good the next and the next. Velour hat by Irene. At Erlebacher's

Paris Orders Sharp Cuts as Inflation Bar

PARIS, Sept. 13 (U.P.)—The French government began a vigorous drive today to head off the threat of a disastrous inflation wave arising from the Western nations' rearmament.

Premier Rene Pleven ordered members of his government to make the anti-inflation campaign their foremost job. Cabinet members were ordered to prune expenses. Finance Ministry officials were in almost continuous conference both on economy measures and the possibility of raising rearmament funds through new taxes and loans.

France's rearmament drive calls for expediture of $10,700,000,000 in the next three years to create 20 fully equipped divisions in western Europe.

As a first economy move, the government has ordered the discharge of 23,000 civil servants to save $192,000,000.

Radical-Socialists Meet In Mood of Cooperation

PARIS, Sept. 13 (NYHT).—The Radical-Socialist Party will open its annual convention Thursday in a frame of mind that bodes well for French political stability.

Continued Radical - Socialist support of Premier Rene Pleven is essential if his coalition cabinet is to continue, and there are preconvention assurances that this continued support will be forthcoming at Deauville.

The most prominent of these indications is the new entente between former Premier Edouard Herriot and former Premier Edouard Daladier.

Both now agree that their party—which is neither radical nor socialist, but liberal—ought to work with Pleven's ministerial coalition of Radicals, Pro-Catholic Popular Republicans and Socialists.

Another breach has been closed with the return of Paul Giacobbi, now minister without portfolio in the Pleven administration, from the ranks of the Gaullist Rally of the French People.

Bid Submitted For 1st Section Of Super-Road

BALTIMORE, Sept 13 (AP).—The Wilmoth Paving Co. of Washington submitted a $556,864 bid today for building the first section of a new super-highway on Georgia Avenue extended from Silver Spring north toward Wheaton.

The Washington firm was the only one to bid on the job.

A State Roads Commission spokesman said it could not be determined immediately if the project might be put up for bids again.

He said the contract may be awarded without further bidding if Wilmoth's figure is found to be in line with advance estimates by commission engineers.

The first section of the new divided highway, with two traffic lanes in each direction, is to run from the Colesville Road, a distance of 1:59 miles.

Ultimately, the expressway will be extended another 3.7 miles north toward Wheaton.

Young Communists Riot To Delay Hamburg Trial

HAMBURG, Germany, Sept. 13 (U.P.)—Several hundred young Communists clashed with police today in an attempt to prevent the trial of 23 comrades before a British summary court.

Several policemen were injured and the trial was delayed for an hour and a half. Five Communists were arrested.

When order had been restored the British judge canceled the charges against 22 of the Communists on the grounds their activity had been directed against the German government and not against the occupying power.

12 Fishermen Feared Lost After Sinking

BOSTON, Sept. 13 (U.P.)—Hope dwindled today for 12 fishermen who took to lifeboats 100 miles at sea when their hurricane-battered fishing dragger sank.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the captain and crew of the New Bedford dragger Theresa A had "one chance in a thousand" of surviving. Coast Guard planes and cutters continued to search the area 100 miles east of Nantucket Island where the men reported Tuesday afternoon that the Theresa was sinking and they were taking to lifeboats.

East Germany Recalls All Workers on Leave

BERLIN, Sept. 13 (AP)—East Germany's Communist government tonight suddenly canceled vacations for all government officials and employes and ordered those now on leave to return immediately.

The government announcement said this was necessary to "put all forces to work in our great task of improving the living standard of our people." Western observers believed there was something else up the Communists' sleeve.

Adm. Baldridge Marks 52d Year in Navy

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 13 (AP). Rear Admiral Harry A. Baldridge, director of the Naval Academy Museum, celebrated his fifty-second anniversary in the Navy today.

The 70-year-old officer entered the academy as a midshipman in 1892. He was retired in 1932 after commanding cruisers and serving as director of naval intelligence. He was later appointed to the museum and has been in charge of that naval showplace since 1937.

One Person in Seven Is Hard of Hearing

(This is the fourth in a series of six articles in which Miss Barrington describes the progress made in the treatment of the blind and deaf. The articles have been read and approved by Dr. Marvin Fisher Jones, surgical director of the department of otolaryngology, Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, and Fred Heffinger, superintendent of that hospital.)

By Kay Barrington

CHAPTER FOUR

When a man loses the power to talk or listen to his fellows—to speak, to see or to hear, the tragedy is overwhelming. Yet only those who have lost their hearing truly realize the difficulty under which the deaf labor and live. For some reason, the deaf, unlike the blind, receive little sympathy.

Helen Keller and others, who have known the loss of both sight and hearing, claim that deafness is the greatest handicap.

"Deafness isolates a man," a famous ear specialist told me. "That is why the deaf have a much harder time adjusting than do the blind. They live in a world of silence. Deprive a man of one of his fundamental means of communication and you unhinge him emotionally."

The Hearing Foundation, Inc., a non-profit research bureau, estimates that 20 million Americans are hard of hearing. In round numbers, this adds up to one person out of every seven. That is three times the number of people who have cancer, heart disease, polio and tuberculosis combined.

Half could be rehabilitated through hearing aids, yet only 700,000 people wear them.

Of the enormous group with inadequate hearing, 3 million are children. One-third are severe cases who need special training and hearing aids to help them get through school. The other two-thirds can be saved from permanent hearing loss only if they receive medical attention in time.

Tonsils, adenoids, a blow on the ear, explosions, continuous exposure to loud noise or infections from such diseases as meningitis, mumps, scarlet fever can bring on a hearing loss.

Only a limited number of doctors and technicians have mastered the skills necessary to help the hard of hearing.

The founding of the Conservation of Hearing Clinic and Otological Research Laboratory, under the direction of Dr. Marvin F. Jones, marked an important advance in the struggle to help the deaf.

Subsidized in part by the American Otological Society through its central research bureau, this unusual clinic works with the New York League for the Hard of Hearing and the American Hearing Society. It is located in the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital.

Here you can see children who have been unable to hear or speak since birth. Operating within the clinic's modest funds, specialists strive constantly to discover causes and cures for deafness. Neurologists, with a knowledge of psychosomatic medicine, form an important part of the staff, for the clinic recognizes the special problems of the deaf and tries to solve each in a personal manner.

Eddie Better Get Rid Of Those Mothballs

By John Crosby

AFTER A GREAT DEAL of huffing and puffing, plus an extraordinary amount of self-congratulation at its own daring, NBC last Sunday unveiled the first in its Sunday night parlay (NBC-TV, 8 p. m.), on which Eddie Cantor, Martin and Lewis and Fred Allen will alternate on successive weeks.

Cantor

NBC had already rather overreached itself in titling its big Saturday night review "The Show of Shows," thereby leaving no very sweeping monicker for its Sunday night extravagance. It's called simply the "Colgate Comedy Theater"—after the well-known university, I expect.

NBC seems to be assuming that the comedian—especially the veteran radio comedian—will be the top dog of video as he was of audio. CBS, on the other hand, is backing the hour-long drama. Personally, I think CBS is on the right track, NBC on the wrong one. Only time will tell which is the more farsighted.

IN THE DEAR, dead days of Flo Ziegfeld and later with Sam Goldwyn, Cantor was always knee-deep in pretty, leggy girls, and he hasn't departed from that tradition on NBC-TV. However, in the interval between Ziegfeld and NBC, Mr. C. has become what the Army used to call a Very Important Person and he gets the VIP treatment.

From the opening number, when the chorus sings about how nice it is to have him back on Broadway, to the closing, when he sings a selection of his old songs, the program dwelt almost exclusively on the glories of Eddie's past. At one point, Cantor and the doorman of the New Amsterdam Theater, where Eddie once held sway, reminisced about the old days of, W. C. Fields, Will Rogers, and, of course, Cantor.

EVEN THE SKETCHES were haunted by ghosts. Cantor participated in one as a disheveled Army private driving a general out of his wits, which sounds like something out of "Yip Yip Yaphank," and in another the clothing merchant who tries to sell a customer a lot of clothes he doesn't want, which sounded suspiciously like Minsky's.

Cantor, who has been on the stage virtually since the days of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, has enormous stage presence; he still sings the old songs—"We're Having a Baby," "Now's the Time to Fall in Love," "Ain't She Sweet," "Ma, He's Making Eyes at Me," and "Charlie, My Boy"—with an exuberance and vitality unmatched by anyone except Al Jolson.

But I've never found him very funny, and I strongly advise him to get the smell of mothballs out of his material if he expects to stand up against the very bright young comics on TV. The rest of the show is handsomely mounted, contains excellent dance numbers and a few songs from a young lady named Yma Sumac who is billed as possessing a "most remarkable vocal range." She has, too, and she also has remarkably expressive eyes, if you like that sort of thing. However, the first essay of the Colgate Comedy Theater is not anything you are going to hug to your breast for any length of time, and it leaves television about where it was—which is to say in the Milton Berle, or paleozoic, era.

Suzanne's Radio Is No Threat to Pepco

Suzanne Brodeur of 5917 14th st. nw. has a table model radio which is causing her a great deal of anguish.

The set has a little pilot light, whose function it is to let the owner know when the radio is turned "on." When the power is shut off, the light is supposed to go out.

That's what's causing the consternation. The pilot light on Suzanne's set blinks on and off, with no regard to whether the set is, at the moment, plugged into a wall socket or being carried from room to room with the cord trailing aimlessly behind.

Several experts who have been consulted have advanced differing theories as to why the pilot light should continue to glow in spite of the complete absence of a visible source of electric power.

One school of thought has it that the power is, in some inexplicable manner, coming from a nearby amateur radio transmitter. Another theory is that the set is getting its juice from some communications channel like the one on which the National Bureau of Standards broadcasts a time signal. Bureau scientists debunked that one in short order.

Best explanation seems to come from the McCarthy Brothers Electronic Service of 707 D st. se. It says the power for the light may be coming from a "charged condenser" within the set, which has accumulated enough electric current to give the small bulb an on-and-off glow, but is not strong enough to produce normal reception.

Miss Brodeur, who is French and teaches concert piano, listens to all explanations impartially, and then says simply: "But I pull out the plug and voila! the light is still on. What is one to think?"

I don't know what you think, or what Miss Brodeur thinks, but I'll betcha I knew what Pepco thinks about lights that glow without electric current.

However, if I were a Pepco stockholder, I wouldn't worry too much about this form of competition. Back on the farm at Nine Mile, O., when I was a boy, we also had lights that used no electric current—and the only one who thought very highly of them was the fellow who sold us kerosene.

GET WELL QUICK, COAK

Now that we're back on a regular routine again, there's supposed to be a daily cartoon in this space, to start your day off with a chuckle. But Cartoonist LeBaron Coakley is ill, and the cartoons will be omitted until he's able to return to work. I know you join me in wishing him a speedy recovery.

It's been many a summer since I saw so many barefoot youngsters on our streets. This year, going barefoot was even popular among the girls . . . Mrs. Roy K. C., during his vacation, picked up the comic section of a newspaper (not ours) and noted that the date on it was August 27. "Good grief," he thought, "I'm due back in Washington." Fortunately, it turned out to be a predated supplement, and the date was still August 22 . . . Mrs. Ruby Lee of King George, Va., writes that she's covered much of the same ground I was over recently, and even rode the "Deadwood Central Railroad" at the Chicago Fair . . . W. Wondree, USAF, of Route 1, Alexandria, Va., tells me that he and his wife couldn't find tourist accommodations when they passed through Dillsboro, Ind., so they stopped at the sleepy health resort there. "The next morning when we ordered hearty breakfasts in the dining room, the folks who were having oatmeal and mineral water looked at us as if to say: 'How did healthy people get in here'?" Mary Handley of Presidential Gardens, Alexandria, Va., says Washington Post Carrier Boy Jim Wood of 3130 South Glebe rd. is the best lad who's ever served her route . . . AT LEAST THEY'RE FRANK ABOUT IT

Nora Moser of 702 Devon pl., Alexandria, Va., reports that on Highway 220, entering Tyrone, Pa., there's a sign which warns:

"Obey the Law. Speed Trap In Operation."

RAIN, RAIN GO AWAY

It looks like the only way to awaken to something other than the pitter-patter of rain on my bedroom window is to write a paragraph grumbling about Washington's fall weather. By the time it appears in print, the sun is sure to be shining.

AH, BUT WHO PLAYS ANGEL FOR THE SINNERS?

A House subcommittee investigating crime in the District has heard a great deal of testimony from numbers writers who were defended by lawyers, but were never asked to pay for these services.

Perhaps this is the origin of the well-known adage: "Crime does not pay."

0 RUNS, 0 HITS, 2 ERRORS

In his story about Louis Johnson's resignation as Secretary of Defense, Post Reporter Edward T. Folliard explained that Johnson had been criticized for "running for the Presidency" while in office.

Henry Clay once said he'd rather be right than President. At the present writing, it appears that Mr. Johnson will be neither.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

President Pleads for Tolerance

By Drew Pearson

Sometimes the President's off-the-record remarks that never reach the papers are his best. These present thought this was the case when Truman addressed the joint session of the AFL-CIO last week.

Pearson

Speaking without notes and obviously straight from the heart, the President made a plea for tolerance in wartime.

To a considerable extent it was a historical speech. The President reviewed the different periods of hysteria which have gripped the country—the Alien and Sedition Act in the early days of the republic, the Know-Nothing Party, and Ku Klux Klanism.

He pointed out that the Know-Nothing Party had been anti-Mason and referred to the fact that he, himself, was a Mason. The Klan, he recalled, was first against the Negro; then when revived in the 1920's, against the Jew and the Catholic.

These were evidences of intolerance which did not truly represent the American people, he said, and he was absolutely confident that the good judgment of the American people would always win out.

The President did not mention the Mundt-Nixon bill or the McCarran bill, but it was obvious he had them in mind. For he referred to congressional witch-hunters who wave the American flag while persecuting alien immigrants and trampling on the rights of loyal Americans.

"This is the raw material of totalitarianism," he said.

While fighting the intolerance of totalitarianism, he emphasized, "we must not take on the methods of totalitarianism. Recalling that totalitarian regimes had persecuted labor unions, religious groups and fraternal organizations, he pointed out that under the Alien and Sedition Act, naturalized citizens hardly dared say anything in public about the Government for fear of being thrown in jail, and this, he inferred, might also happen under the Mundt-Nixon and McCarran bills.

Behind Marine Clash

Most people don't know it, but when President Truman ousted Admiral Louis Denfeld as chief of naval operations last year, he also planned to oust Gen. Clifton Cates as commandant of the Marine Corps.

Cates was a strong ally of Denfeld in the B-36 row between the Navy and the Air Force. However, public reaction to Denfeld's ouster was so hot that the President changed his mind about relieving General Cates.

Net result was that no love has been lost between Mr. Truman and the Marine Corps commander; so that the President—who has a long memory for those who ever cross him—was not anxious to eat crow last week.

When General Cates was called to the White House, therefore, he got a formal, though polite, greeting. Speaking a little stiffly, the Commander in Chief told the Marine Corps commander that he was making a public apology to the Marines "for the good of the country" and the war effort. He added that he had been too hasty and his words were too strong.

However, he felt that there were some grounds for his reference to the Marines' propaganda activities. As an instance, he cited the terrific pressure he was getting to give the Marines a voice on the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Note—General Cates, himself, has not been averse to this pressure. If the Marines were made part of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, he would become the Marine Corps representative on it.

Slapping a Neighbor

Last spring, flags along Constitution ave. read "Welcome Gonzalez Videla!" as the President of Chile paid an official visit to the United States. A good part of Washington turned out, plus President Truman and all the Cabinet to greet the head of the neighbor nation which had banned communism and was considered one of the best democratic friends of the United States.

President Videla did not ask for anything when he came to Washington. He did not need to. For the State Department has long known that what Chile wants most is to have our 2-cents-per-pound excise tax on copper held in abeyance.

All during the war, because we needed copper badly, this tax was held in abeyance, since what it actually amounted to was a penalty against the American people and the United States Army-Navy.

Shortly after President Videla had gone back to Chile, however, Congress literally slapped him in the face by restoring the tax against copper. Reverberations from below the Rio Grande were painful and quite serious.

Since then the House of Representatives has voted to suspend the tax; but, despite repeated urging by President Truman, the Senate has not.

A handful of Rocky Mountain Senators from copper areas is the reason why. Senators Hayden and McFarland of Arizona, where the Phelps Dodge copper mines are located, have led this bloc, and so far have been successful in stymieing about 80 other Senators, plus the House of Representatives. Most interesting of all, however, is the fact that Senator Tom Connally, who has made speech after speech championing the good-neighbor policy, in this case has voted the other way.

Note—Unfortunate fact is that Latin Americans who don't understand the intricacies of our legislative system and think that Truman should be able to control Congress consider the copper tax a slapdown by the entire United States.

Alaska and Hawaii

President Truman told Hawaiian Delegate Joseph Farrington and Alaskan Delegate E. L. (Bob) Bartlett last week that their Territories would never be "adequately defended" until they attained statehood.

Truman explained that a vital factor in defense was morale. He added that morale was bound to suffer when people were taxed and their sons drafted without some voice in making the laws that govern them.

"That certainly is true of Hawaii," spoke up Farrington. "Our casualties in Korea have been five times greater than the proportionate rate by population in the 48 States."

"I've done everything I can to get the statehood bills passed, but certain people in Congress have blocked me at every turn," Truman insisted. "Now these people are trying to make it appear that it would help Russia if the people of Hawaii and Alaska achieved statehood."

This drew a hot retort from Bartlett, who recalled that one of the statehood foes, GOP Senator Andrew F. Schoeppel, had charged that Alaskan Eskimos were visiting back and forth with Siberians.

"That simply isn't true," asserted Bartlett. "The Russians themselves put an end to the practice three years ago by arresting 20 of our Eskimos who went over to Siberia. The Eskimos were held for several weeks and grilled closely about Alaskan defenses. There haven't been any visits since."

Note—Actually American Eskimos had served as useful intelligence observers to find out what fortifications were being built on Soviet islands. The Russians knew this.

Schacht Is Acquitted

LUENEBURG, Germany, Sept. 13 (AP).—Hjalmar Schacht, 73, financial wizard of the Hitler regime, was acquitted of charges of naziism today in his fifth appearance before a denazification court. In the three-week German court trial the prosecution demanded that Schacht, former president of the Reichsbank, be classified as a "minor Nazi," the third worst type of Nazi.
